

STELLAR WHEELHOUSE

THE MOST COMPREHENSIVE AND FOCUSED SPORTS ASTROLOGY

TREATISE EVER CREATED

A SHARP, INTENSIVE, DEDICATED METHOD FOR IDENTIFYING WINNERS

AGAINST THE SPREAD FROM ONE CHART ALONE

2

(copyright 2022 David Sloan, all rights reserved)

(copyright 2026 David Sloan, all rights reserved) revised second edition

3

Foreword

2

PART I

The Foundatio

n

8

The Moon As Timekeeper 14

Timing Scoring Chances 21

Planets and Angles 23

A Part That Matters 28

PART II

Arrangement and Order 35

The Normal Connection 38

Reverse and Repeat 44

A Fortunate Discovery 52

Giving Real Games a Try 58

PART III

The Sum of The Parts 74

The Hidden Points 75

29 and Fiery 77

I Must Be Crazy 79

A Most Helpful List 83

Serious Practice 98

10 Super Bowls 139

A Few World Cups 164

More Detailed Practice 170

Final Notes|Addendum 193

4

FOREWORD

This is a book 15 years in the making.

As you well know, an astrology chart is an ephemeral mélange wherein dozens of planetary bodies and aspects coalesce. And that alone does not consider the nature of each planet point: its sign, its strength, its status.

We know the story as astro nerds and analytical thinkers. Please take that as a compliment! I consider myself one of those too!

Yet within this snapshot, one can absolutely extract valuable information that gives a distinct, sizeable, and repeatable edge in prediction. Such a craft would not exist intact concealed for centuries were this not so.

My path of discovery has gone through the thickest brambles and murkiest sludge to the higher vistas above. Some of the methods I have uncovered - through thorough study and review of tens of thousands of charts of sports games over a 15-year period - will be absolute anathema to traditional astro students. They were for me as well!

At times I could not believe the answers I was finding could be so. The way answers crystallized with the movement of the match. The elegance in the solutions.

Only after isolating game after game where the ideas were validated and repeatedly came true, did I decide there was no other option but to trust it. I use what works. The proof is in the flow of the game, the sudden scoring spurts and droughts, the theme of the matches, and of course, the final score. The same planetary 'words' continued to form the same 'sentences' time and again. The data accumulated, the successes repeated, and the conclusions began to bear fruit. And so did my betting accounts.

The games and matches in this work are from the biggest sports in the United States and the world: NBA and college basketball, soccer (football) from top divisions such as English Premier League and UEFA Champions League, MLB (American baseball), NFL and college football. They all can be bet on with the exact same rules.

And the beauty, as those who use astro in trading the markets with Gann methods know well, is reproducibility. Choosing sports games to bet on and profit from in this way is ideal: The advantage does not fade with league rule changes, with fickle data analysis, with people "catching on." Charts from 54 years ago and 16 years ago work as they do today and as they should 45 years hence.

I have honed my sports prediction craft by betting my own money using this method for many years now. Heartache, toil, sweat, mental anguish; success, refinement, joy. Rinse and repeat. I have earned substantial money using this. Repeatedly in every celestial environment. It works.

Sports betting in this fashion is a fantastic way to grow your income, to have a significant edge over dozens, hundreds and thousands of individual games.

5

The bones and the framework, if you will, was originally developed by the English traditional astrologer John Frawley in his book "Sports Astrology" published in 2007 (Apprentice Books). In this informative and witty text, he reviews multiple techniques for sporting event astrological prediction.

One of those methods is described in the book's chapter "The Chart For The Event" pgs. 71-118. It takes up less than ¼ of the total book. And it is this particular technique which was the launching point for my further development.

Throughout my deep, relentless, and exhilarating journey in detailed study over 100,000+ game charts (see I MUST be an astro nerd, who else would exclaim that was fun!), I have massively expanded upon his introductory work and found important major discoveries - absolutely crucial rules - necessary for successful sports prediction using the chart for the event.

The 13 Original Rules of 'Basket Ball', 1891. On display at the University of Kansas.

Without them, you will fall flat and flail in bewilderment. Believe me, I know.

I struggled mightily in the beginning. Yet I could see the gold specks of promise. I could feel and view it was the right concept. Games fell in line with the chart more times than chance. Yet it was chaotic.

Fragments were there, but more pieces were missing.

Incessantly nonetheless, Miss Muse whispered to keep pursuing this robustly.

I also know from my personal communication with John around 2009 that he wanted people to take this further - he knew it needed more fleshing out from the initial pillars upon which he built this way of winning. I give effusive thanks and praise to Mr. Frawley for his generosity in sharing the initial method.

6

The months went by and little victories increased. One success led to another discovery and a positive feedback loop was produced.

The gossamer murmurs of potential turn less fleeting over the years and sentences of kinetic explanation form. Then Fortuna grants you a favor or two for your efforts. The obsessive review of the sports leagues' contests presents prizes. Games with all the right substance repeat something from games past just so. Ideas are confirmed in the clearest ways. The Eureka moments arrive.

So it goes as the path is adorned with both dross and treasure: Diligently watching games over time, obsessively wondering - while simultaneously trusting - that answers to further questions will arise.

Then it arrives, typing in a magical game that elucidates my lengthy query: one which alchemically draws the spirit of the principle right out of the chart.

And now we too have arrived: I have reached a most suitable checkpoint and created a fully functioning, standalone prediction technique using one astrology chart alone for profitable sports betting in a regular game or match. This means profit in betting against the spread (ATS: also known as the line, the goal line in soccer, Asian Handicap, etc.) as well as traditional money line betting. The beautiful feature with this material: it can be learned by non-astrologers. Would knowing basic astro help to jump start the process? Sure. I know much of this audience is extremely intelligent. Rocketscientists, technical engineers. Detail-minded stock market fiends looking for the keys to the kingdom. Sports betting savants who know their stuff. PhD consultants back testing decades of 5-minute data in the futures markets.

I intend this book to be learned by astro enthusiasts as well as dedicated non-astro sports fans. It matters not if you have cared a lick about astrology in your life. You can learn this with diligent pursuit and interest.

I expect aggressive sports fans with a sharp mind and desire to dig deep to latch onto and run with this method. It can be picked up relatively quickly yet requires subtle nuance to tease out the very best games and situations. Call it roughly 80-90% strict technique and 'science,' 10-20% feel and 'art.'

I have no special affinity for any 'school of astrology.' No extra love for 'traditional' or 'modern' astrology, Western, Eastern or other. I want to win. I demand ideas and methods that work.

So the age-old question arises when someone is sharing something that has been hard-earned and is purported to make money: Why share and sell your method if it works so well? Easy answer.

Firstly, it is always beneficial to earn some money from my hard work in other fashions besides betting.

Yes it works. Yes my account grows. I use that money to fund my life, sock away for savings, family pursuits and the like. It goes steadily up as I have a significant edge, but there are days and weeks where I have lulls due to the norms of statistical variance. Or periods where the planets have a funky mishmash of rulership, stations and degrees that make it prudent to pause a couple days. Or the charts simply say to be patient. Any businessperson and investor know multiple streams of income is ideal. Secondly, this information needs to be recorded, shared, and distributed for historical posterity and future learning. This is most important to me. I want this knowledge to benefit the field and practitioners. There is a fair chance that the words I share will light the metaphorical filaments in your lamp as you exclaim "Ah ha, THAT explains why my [insert trading technique] or [state market observation over many years] always does that!" There is often too much subjectivity in astrology study that leaves large gaps of 'maybe.' Well, when you place many multi-thousand-dollar bets a day on games, there is no room for flippancy. No psychobabble or feelings to be assuaged. It worked and you got it right, or it did not and you got it wrong. Period, end of story. Heck, I read the Mountain Astrologer and historical astrological literature. I like seeing psychological interpretations of historical figures in the context of the natal chart. But this work is not about the globe-moving bravery of an activist or understanding the emotional undertones of Edgar Allen Poe's works from his time as a literary critic. I want the winning bet. Immediate feedback. Period. Ring up the result and bring it to me. The technique works very well. There may be additional facts I discover in years to come that will further improve accuracy. This may dovetail with another author's hypotheses and writing of which I am unaware and create synergy: a better mousetrap with the combined knowledge. I am very comfortable with my method as it stands now. There are a couple itches I have trouble scratching when they appear in an occasional chart. The cool thing is, no one is forcing me or you to bet that game. We record it, note the setup and outcome, and move on. Over time the ripples dissipate, and clear answers emerge beneath the stream. Some of them turn out as precious gemstones among the silt pile. One rather inconvenient fact about the learning process I have very patiently and ultimately humorously discovered: The solar system does not say "Hey, I heard you want to know the exact benefit for the favorite if Venus is conjunct the Ascendant, the Moon is trine Mars, Uranus is by the Midheaven and nothing else in the chart is influencing that result. Here ya go, a perfectly attuned game ordered up just for you with these characteristics!" Ha, nope! More like this: "Hey there, you get some of that in this chart - I will gift you this - but the Moon is squaring Mercury as well and affecting the purity of that signal. And oh incidentally, Neptune is very slow and stationing tonight, so factor that in too." Ah yes. Taken with gratitude. Therefore, teasing out individual components can take months and years. Constructing the charts and seeing a setup just as imagined, free of polluting effects to view the pure energy of combination, is a real gift. And they do happen. Those charts have led to exquisite discoveries. So here we are: This book will serve as your source for training from the ground up. I will build the method through a very efficient development process, beginning with building blocks in deconstructed charts of contests that define simple points. This is your boot camp, your development from a one-celled sporting organism to a mighty master-level mammal!

7

Alright bad jokes aside, know that I will guide you through learning my sports prediction language by building up elementary vocabulary and definitions. I know you will enjoy this conversational style of communicating knowledge. This will give you confidence to turn the A-B-Cs into words and basic sentences and see how prediction is possible. Evolving from the basics, you will develop the intermediate skills in adding a fuller complement of planets, house cusps and angles to see the intricacies arise in these contests.

8

At that point, you will be ready to take on the full chart prediction using my wholly developed approach.

Methods that I promise no one is using in concert until now. And certainly not with the potency it can deliver.

These charts are not cherry-picked. They go on every day of the year. I have so many charts, I could fill a whole lot of books with seriously good examples. In fact, I plan to have Volume 2 of this series dedicated to just that: additional games and insight with specific focus on unique setups as they transpire. More volume equals further confidence in summarizing what you see on the wheel and turning that into assured selection and profit. Repetition will inspire you.

This book is the sweat and effort following years of deep thought, study and brute evaluation. Like most of the esoteric techniques, even if everyone knew the exact method, very few have the perseverance and focus to make it work.

Most of us also understand natural law dictates if the technique is not earned and purchased in earnest, pilfering something for nothing gains the person no credits. That person laments it does not work for them, and projects therefore, that it does not work at all. That person would be incorrect.

As the reader, you have my promise and solemn word: I am sharing all my secrets here in this work.

Nothing is held back. You get every technique I currently know. I remain a humble student of the stars and stay astonished at how much there is yet to know. Perhaps somebody does it better. Yet what I do know is highly profitable stuff.

The most valuable connections in the chart for winning prediction: Setups that put the fiery glow in my eyes when they appear on my screen, because I know it is a terrific game with 80%+ probability; setups for blowouts, chart arrangements for big underdogs to have a great outright winning chance: they are all here and more.

Like any worthy pursuit, it ain't easy at first! It takes a lot of simultaneous calculation to come up with a prediction. Yet it is a process to dedicate yourself, hone, and about which you will feel good. You will develop the "feel" and "touch" as I have. Think about a successful intraday trader. Perhaps you are one of them. How many conscious and subconscious inputs are you processing in scrutinizing the ticks flashing on your screen, your indicators, your price and time targets, your channels and more? You have incorporated them into your being over the years.

So it is and will be with this method as well. Keep in mind, another beneficial feature of sports betting: you can take your pleasant time analyzing the chart. Once you decide and place your bet, that is it. No stressful moments wondering to move your stops or psychological missteps to avoid. Your bet is in, your odds are set and you can relax as the decision has been made.

9

Instant profit and prosperity are not bestowed because you want to get stuff. Be disciplined, be mentally tough, have a winning mentality. Do not blame others and continually feel the victim. Do not be stuck on your own story: It is easy to carry around your tale like a business card. Resist the urge.

Be the best you can. By simply investing in yourself, in your skillset, in your learning abilities and your natural capacity, you have taken the first step to success.

I titled this book Stellar Wheelhouse for a reason. A wheelhouse is a center of control or leadership. The zone where a ballplayer feels most comfortable having the hitting edge. An area of skill and expertise in line with your abilities. And in nautical terms, the wheelhouse is the actual command center and structure surrounding the ship wheel.

No longer will you need to rely on random stats, touts, handicappers, or your friends again. Take control and have the most powerful, forward-knowing prediction sports asset in your hands.

I have my theories on fate, free will, whether energies are symbolic, if they are sent through the ether and more. But why it all works? Best left as a discussion among ancient philosophers and modern metaphysical seekers.

So enough with the pleasantries, right! Are you ready?

The aim of this text is practical: earn money from sports betting using astrology. I trust you will see that aim realized by the conclusion of this book. Be amazed time and again how the flow of events in your chart come to life in the actual stadiums and arenas. The world we live in is zanier, stranger and more beautiful than we might imagine.

To your success! Let us get started.

10

PART I - THE FOUNDATION

Sports betting has exploded in the United States, finally catching up to the rest-of-world.

The global sports betting industry reached a market size of 203 billion US dollars in 2020. Sports betting revenue in the United States alone has grown from 1.55 billion dollars in 2020 to over 15 billion in 2024.

This is entirely due to the mammoth increase in online sportsbook legalization and the ability to place sports wagers from a computer or mobile phone. And while not the endless sea of money present in global stock markets, it is sufficiently vast to extract lots of money. It is a thrilling proposition to get the game winner, the spread winner, or the total correct as you predicted. Everyone likes to be right. It is human nature. You may remember Moneyball by Michael Lewis (who also wrote The Big Short): The Oakland A's began the data analytics revolution in sports by discovering observations that went against known baseball wisdom. As a result, they kept an edge with competitive teams for many years on a small budget. Now everyone plays that game. To me, astrology is the clear next step and evolution. The military used 'unorthodox' data sources such as remote viewers for many years with great success and on the cheap to add to their analysis bucket for key operational decisions. It got renewed year after year because it worked. And so we shall use our Stellar Wheelhouse advantage to establish, gain and keep our edge in sports betting. James Naismith, the inventor of basketball. How to begin? It is time to look at the games for the day. So I need to create a chart for the event.

11

I enter the data in my astrology program (my choice is Solar Fire and I highly recommend this for ease of use and to utilize my template). Here is how the edit chart data screen looks: I type the teams and the odds in the Chart Name. I enter the date, time and place. After the first five rows are completed, the program takes care of everything else. Select Placidus Houses and Tropical Zodiac. I have found a time-based house system, specifically Placidus, the best for this work. Keep in mind, the actual start time depends on the sport and league. MLB games typically start on time to 2 minutes late. NFL games 0-3 minutes late. NBA games average 10 minutes late (if it says 7:00pm eastern, it will start about 7:10pm). English Premier League games and all soccer (football) matches are nearly always on time. If an NBA doubleheader game on a major TV station, be mindful of the start times. If it is a championship game, be aware, the times can be different from the listed one due to pre-game pageantry. Most importantly, shortly after the game, all the major websites such as nfl.com, nba.com and mlb.com provide a Gamebook for review. This is a PDF download available when you click on game details for your contest. Included in that summary is a note of the exact start time. MLB.com lists it in the box score on their site as soon as the game starts. This is how you confirm the start times for research without watching the game live. Always check after all your games, especially the first games or opening week as well, to ensure you are tracking the times correctly for your predicted games. Now, we have entered chart data. We are presented with a chart on our screen. How does this prediction stuff work anyhow? What do we do next? Firstly, we need to define the teams in the astrology wheel.

12

We do this by favorite and underdog.

Not home vs visitor. Not colors of uniforms or kits. By favorite vs underdog. The favorite means that team is expected to win the game according to the betting markets. In sportsbooks, that is indicated by a minus value in American odds. Some examples: Switzerland -260 means you would need to bet $260 to win $100 (you would get back your $260 plus another $100). Los Angeles Lakers -6.5 -108 on the spread means the Lakers are favored by 6.5 points. They would need to win by 7 points for your $1000 bet to earn another $910.

The underdog is noted by the plus sign. Bayern Munich +0.5 means they are underdogs by half a goal. If the final score was 1:1, then this would be a winning bet, as Bayern gets that amount added to their score. Kansas City Chiefs +145 indicates the team is the underdog on the moneyline and means betting $5000 on KC +145 to win would return you $12250 (your original $5000 plus your $7250 winnings).

This is a blank chart wheel. The wheel is divided into 12 areas called houses. They are labeled starting with House 1 as the left middle "pie piece." You can see the house number in the inner circle. They go in numerical order from House 1 counterclockwise through House 12.

13

Now look at this wheel below. At the house dividing lines, which are called house cusps, I have added an L. L stands for Lord. This terminology is not religious: It simply means that the Lord or Owner of each house is determined by the sign on the house cusp. There is a planet that rules each of the signs in astrology. Classical astrologers have a different view than modern astrologers on this hierarchy. Through tens of thousands of charts, I have found what works in the realm of sports prediction. Here it is.

1 Mars 2 _____ 3 Mercury
4 Moon 5 Sun 6 _____
7 Venus 8 Pluto 9 Jupiter
0 Saturn - Uranus = Neptune

14

These are the well-known modern rulerships with Uranus for Aquarius, Neptune for Pisces, and Pluto for Scorpio. The others are very familiar as well: Mars for Aries, Mercury for Gemini, Moon for Cancer, Sun for Leo, Venus for Libra, Jupiter for Sagittarius, and Saturn for Capricorn. You will notice I have left Taurus and Virgo blank for now. More on those later!

Viewing our chart then, House 1 has the sign of Scorpio on the cusp. That means Lord 1 (L1) is the planet that rules Scorpio. This is Pluto.

House 2 has the sign of Sagittarius on the cusp. That means Lord 2 (L2) is the planet that rules

Sagittarius. This is Jupiter. And so on.

The favorite gets assigned certain planets and the underdog gets assigned certain planets. Each team's planet assignments are based on the Lords of the chart.

The favorite planets are these Lords = L1, L10, L2, L6, L5.

The underdog planets are these Lords = L7, L4, L8, L12, L11.

15

So in our example chart above, the favorite's planets are Pluto L1, Sun L10, Jupiter L2, Mars L6 and Neptune L5.

You will quickly learn to recognize and assign these in your head or on paper for each team. All of them have impact. L1 and L7, followed by L10 and L4, are the most important. The remaining Lords are listed roughly in order of strength and value from there. For those newer to astrology, here are the planet glyphs (symbols) used in this book:

Moon b
Sun a Mercury c
Venus d
Mars f
Jupiter g
Saturn h Uranus i Neptune j
Pluto k

(plus 2 more that we will explore later).

But how were these house lord assignments chosen? Honestly, it is through years of studying each game intently and seeing the results from the planet movements and the interactions therein during the game timeframe.

But from a theoretical perspective, it is the following:

House 1 is the self. House 7 is the other.

The favorite gets Lord 1 as itself and the opponent, the underdog, gets Lord 7 as itself.

All subsequent house ownership flows from that.

House 10 is prestige, professional status, name, and fame.

The favorite (fav) gets L10. The underdog (dog) gets its own 10th house starting from its own self at House 7, which is L4 (10 houses counting around from House 7 = House 4).

16

House 2 is the total resources, natural abilities, how one prospers and life force. Fav gets L2, Dog gets L8.

House 6 is the everyday work and grind. Fav gets L6, Dog gets L12.

House 5 is athletic expression and creative ability. Fav gets L5, Dog gets L11.

You have probably noticed I am omitting the 3-9 axis. Why is that? It rules communication, siblings, education. I have tracked long enough to be confident in L3-L9 omission without concern. We can confidently predict without those house rulers. That usually removes two planets from our evaluation each time as well!

From our sports perspective, we do not need to know or care about theories. Just memorize this:

The favorite planets are these Lords = L1, L10, L2, L6, L5.

The underdog planets are these Lords = L7, L4, L8, L12, L11.

"Nervous flashlights scan my dreams

Liquid shadows silence their screams

I smile at the moon

Chasing water from the sky

I argue with the clouds

Stealing beauty from my eyes"

"Hey Wolf Moon, Come Cast Your Spell On Me"

b

Let us take a look at the first planet. The Moon. As ever, the Moon is all-important. In sports games the Moon is the timekeeper and conductor. The Moon frames the time flow of the game. The Moon is the fastest moving planet that we use.

If the Moon is at 11 Aries in your chart, the game will be complete when the Moon has moved about 5 degrees, in this case to 16 Aries. That is, you will symbolically move the Moon 5 degrees for the length of the game. All other planets and angles stay still; the Moon moves for creating aspects to planets.

17

This 5-degree range is perfect for all NFL, NBA, MLB, college basketball and football, and regular soccer matches.

As the Moon moves from 11 to 16 Aries, you will note the aspects it makes. An aspect is an angular relationship between planets measured in degrees. Let us look at some examples to see what I mean.

Here we see the Moon at 11 Aries applying (moving closer) to aspect the Sun at 14 Gemini.

We would note this because it is within the 5-degree Moon travel range for our game.

What aspects do we use, you ask? We use all the major aspects.

Conjunction = 0, Sextile = 60, Square = 90, Trine = 120, Opposition = 180.

So this aspect is a sextile = The Moon will sextile the Sun in 3 degrees.

18

Let us add a planet and view another chart. Here we see the Moon in Cancer. I typically make a mental note "hmm Moon at 16 Cancer. Ok, 16 to 21 will be the things to first look at for Moon aspects in the chart." I also utilize a modulus strip to visualize this on my charts that I will later show.

Look! It appears we have two other planets within 5 degrees in this chart: the Moon will go to trine Neptune at 18 Pisces and then quickly to sextile Sun at 18 Taurus.

Now we need to think about the planets in context of their assignments to a team! Because that is how they are linked to the game's outcome. In our Moon-Sun-Neptune chart above, we see the Moon aspecting Neptune first.

What is Neptune in this chart? Recall that Neptune rules Pisces. Pisces is on the 10th cusp. So Neptune is therefore Lord 10. And remembering our Lord assignments, Lord 10 is for the favorite!

This means we have one item in our chart - Moon trine Neptune - that helps the favorite. Great, we shall continue. (Yes I see that Pisces also rules the 9th house. Remember that we do not use L3 and L9 in our work.

What's next for the Moon on its journey? The Moon then goes to sextile Sun.

The Sun rules Leo. Leo is the sign on the 2 nd house cusp. So the Sun is Lord 2. And Lord 2 is also for the favorite! So Moon sextile Sun helps the favorite.

19

Wow, so that is 2 beneficial items for the favorite so far, while nothing for the dog.

This is how you start determining what team gets the nod from the solar system with an advantage.

We will see the importance of the Moon as we progress in this book. For now, think of the Moon like a generous gift giver or the sweet ring bearer girl at a wedding: she distributes nice presents to the team with which she creates aspects. The planet she aspects is the team that gets the gift.

The normal Moon in any major aspect to any normal planet within about 5 degrees helps that planet's team during the event. The Moon dictates the script of the game. We know the lines of the screenplay in advance. We know the Moon will read from its starting point across the next $4\frac{1}{2}$ - 5 degrees.

There is another ability that the Moon has in our games. If applying within 2 degrees of any major angle (Ascendant ASC, Descendant DSC, Midheaven MC, Imum Coeli IC), the Moon is a strong influence.

Consider it from the favorite's perspective unless Cancer is L7 (the strongest dog house). Once past the angle, it quickly loses effectiveness.

For new astro individuals: the Ascendant (ASC) is the rising degree, the point on the eastern horizon of the chart. The Midheaven (MC) is the highest point in the sky, the longitudinal degree that intercepts the ecliptic: also known as the path of the sun in the sky. The Descendant (DSC) is the 180-degree opposite of the Ascendant. And the IC (Imum Coeli, "bottom of the sky") is exactly opposite the MC. Check them out labeled on this chart.

20

Let us return to our Moon-Sun-Neptune chart again. We see the Moon at 16Can46 exactly on the Ascendant at 16Ca49. And that is very strong for the favorite too! Why? Because it is applying on the 1st house cusp, which is the most important favorite house.

If the Moon were at 18 Cancer with Ascendant at 16 Cancer, then the Moon would be about 2 degrees separating and already passed the exact aspect with the Ascendant. In that case, the juice and energy are gone. This typically happens almost immediately after the exact aspect. You would ignore the Moon near the Ascendant there because it would have passed by too far.

So in our example chart here, we have not 1, not 2, but 3 strong things for the favorite! We have the Moon aspecting L10 (good for fav), then the Moon aspecting L2 (good for fav) and finally the Moon smack on the Ascendant (very good for fav). This is a potent game to bet strongly on the favorite!

And this does sometimes happen: 3 (or more!) strong indicators for one side, and none for the other.

Those are the most promising ones to filter and identify.

Side note: I lock my charts with the Midheaven straight up and down. In reality it moves side to side through the day. For easy visualization and simplicity, I always prefer to keep houses identical in size.

Just a little technical stuff to note in your software.

A quick mental exercise for you: What if we had a chart where the Moon was at 22 Pisces and the Descendant (remember, that is the 7th house owned by the underdog) was at 23 Pisces?

Right, it means the dog would have a great chance in that game, as the Moon is gifting its presence to the dog by being inside our 2-degree window, within 1 degree applying (moving closer) to the Descendant! It would be one strong factor to consider in our evaluation.

Let us look at another chart:

21

We see the Moon moving to conjunct Mars in 2 ½ degrees. That is important, so we need to figure out what team Mars is for this time. We must look to Aries as Mars rules that sign. We see Aries on the 7th house. That is the dog's strongest house and therefore Mars is the dog's most important planet. So Moon conjunct L7 Mars will help the dog! Moon-Planet conjunctions are strong but they are not the final say in the game. Remember, you must follow Moon aspects through the 4½ to 5 travel degrees.

Do you see anything else? Yes, there is a key aspect to see: L7 Mars is at 19 Leo. The Ascendant and Descendant (Asc-Dsc axis) are at 20 Leo. That means Mars is within 1 degree applying in a sextile/trine to the Asc-Dsc axis (I will refer going forward to any sextile or trine to the Asc-Dsc or Mc-Ic axis as "trine, whether its trine to the Asc or Dsc, it matters not)! This will really boost the underdog's chances even more!

As a rule, normal planets applying trine the ASC-DSC axis significantly help that team. The L1 or L7 planet less than 2 degrees and closer for the strongest effect. We therefore have two very strong energies in this chart pushing for the dog: Moon conjunct Lord 7 Mars and Lord 7 Mars sextile-trine the ASC-MC axis. This would be a solid bet on the underdog either taking the points (like +0.5 goals, +6.5 in an NBA game, etc.) or even betting on the moneyline to win outright (like +190 to win), depending on just how much an underdog the team is.

A huge underdog would need at least 2 very strong factors in the chart, if not 3 or 4, to get a win. The last-place team in the table or standings is not going to beat the first-place team with one tiny little moon aspect to one of the dog's planets. The favorite is a favorite for a reason. If everything is broadly neutral and humdrum in the chart, then a large favorite should naturally be expected to win.

We only bet when we see multiple strong factors for one team, with minimal or no factors for the other. We maximize our chances. We look for the good setups. It is no different than watching a stock reach your ideal price and time to enter your trade. We parse through the games for the day, we identify the themes and setups in those charts, and we focus on the best games capitalizing on the greatest balance of one team's "tally of goodness" vs the other for our bets.

22

The Circa Sportsbook, Las Vegas, Nevada

You can think of it like a simple scale or ledger. Each team has a side of the scale for each contest. You are looking for lots of marbles heavy on one side of the scale with only a light smattering on the other.

You work that process for each game that you review. Once that is calculated for each of your games, there you go: You have discovered the strongest teams that are getting the celestial boost, the stellar tailwinds if you will versus the opponent, and you have found your bets.

23

I am giving you a slightly bigger challenge now. This chart looks a little fuller right? More planets!

The process is the same. The Moon is at 7 Sag. It will go from 7 to 12 Sag for the game. Now take a moment and see what planets it hits on its passage.

Good, you immediately spot it squares Venus Lord 8, since Libra is the sign on the 8 th house cusp. Mark

one down in the dog column, as Lord of House 8 is for the dogs (...isn't it truly though).

What next? Yes indeed, the Moon goes to oppose L2 Mars after 3 degrees, still in the Moon travel window. L2 is always a planet for the favorite. So that is one for the favorite. Hmm, 1 each now for the dog and favorite.

I will draw your attention to the order of the aspects: first for the dog, and then the fav. This is a very valuable point: Repeatedly, you will be able to time team scoring opportunities to the Moon aspects.

The Moon squares Venus in about $1\frac{1}{2}$ degrees to initially help the dog. We know the Moon moves about 5 degrees in the game. 1.5 divided by 5 is 30% . This means at the 30% time mark in the contest, the dog has a great chance to score.

Say this is a baseball game chart. You are very likely to see scoring and base runners increase for the underdog at a third of the way, or about the 3rd inning. And you can then expect the favorite to have scoring chances and runs around the 5th

-6

th inning since that roughly corresponds to 3 degrees. These are excellent ways to estimate when the teams will score. Especially when it's an aspect to the strongest planets that rule L1, L10, L7 or L4.

24

If it were a soccer game, you would expect big chances and a potential goal for the dog around the 30-minute mark. And the same for the favorite in the 45-to-60-minute window in the 2nd half.

That is rather cool to know ahead of time, you would agree!

Back to the chart, where there is one more Moon point to make. Look at the Moon again at 7 Sag. The Asc-Dsc axis is 8 Pisces. Ah ha, that means the Moon is tightly squaring (90° degree angle) the Asc-Dsc axis. This is a big deal!

While the Moon always gives the team a boost depending on the planet it touches (again, think of the aspects like offensive scoring surges, chances and outputs in the game), as we've discussed, the Moon also gives a large boost on aspects to angles.

But how do we know if this benefits the fav or dog?

Consider it from the favorite's perspective unless Cancer is L7 (the strongest dog house). Not only does a normal Moon benefit a team when applying to conjunct an angle within 2 degrees, any normal

Moon aspect to the ASC, DSC, MC or IC will bring beneficial effect to the favorite every time as well.

Seeing if the Moon is within 2 degrees conjunct or in other major aspect with an angle axis is always among the first things to review in our charts. This is an overall theme of benefit for the entire game for the favorite - there is no specific scoring timing for a tight aspect from the Moon to an angle.

This presents an ideal scenario: we have the normal Moon hitting an angle that is in alignment with our chosen team from the Moon to Planet aspects too. Meaning when the Moon aspects an angle, then we are looking to bet the favorite should other chart factors point that way too (except when Moon is L7, as that represents the dog). The same with L1, L6, L2, L5. Make sense?

Excellent.

In this chart, L5 is Cancer. Think of the Moon like the general public: The public usually roots for the favorite and backs the favorite. So unless there's special circumstances, an aspect from the Moon to angle will provide the favorite advantage.

Here, L5 is a favorite house. That makes it easy: the Moon square the Asc-Dsc greatly benefits the favorite.

Note while we do move the Moon 5 degrees to analyze what planets it aspects, for Moon-angle aspects we only look at the Moon statically from the start. As an example, a Moon 4 degrees away from squaring the MC would not count as squaring the MC-IC. It is too far away at the start. The Moon must be within 2 degrees aspecting an angle at the start to count. The full total here then for this match is 2 items for the favorite (Moon trine ASC and Moon opposite Mars) and 1 for the dog. The Moon-ASC aspect is an overall theme for the entire game: It should benefit the favorite throughout. We know the dog has a boost before the first half of the game is over, and that is it. Apart from that chance, the general flow of the game - and especially the second half of the game - should fully belong to the favorite. I would feel good about betting the favorite in this game and be confident in my wager.

25

Now if the Moon were not aspecting the angle, and it was simply the Moon-Venus followed by the Moon-Mars, then I would definitely pass on the game, since that is one Moon benefit for each team. As previously noted, I recommend looking as many of the day's games as you can. Then evaluate the best choices from that group. If you do only review a few games and see a fantastic setup, then super! We will explore this further in later pages as I walk you through a full game day so you can see my thought process in more detail. I've mentioned that we use all the major aspects: 0, 60, 90, 120, and 180. For all Moon to Planet aspects, the type of aspect is irrelevant. They all have essentially the same effect. That is, a Moon-Mercury square vs a Moon-Mercury trine does not matter, it will bring effect to that Lord's team the same both ways. A Moon-Sun opposition counts the same as a Moon-Sun trine. To be more granular, to speak in data parlance these days, I would tell you that in my experience, the hard aspects (square 90, opposition 180) may have a little more oomph than the conjunction, sextile and trine. But for all practical purposes all Moon-Planet aspects count the same. However, the Lord that is being aspected by the Moon does matter. It is a fact that generally speaking, a Moon aspect to L1 or L10 is stronger than an aspect to L2, L6, with L5 being the weakest. Similarly, it is a fact that generally speaking, a Moon aspect to L7 or L4 is stronger than an aspect to L8, L12, with L11 being the weakest. This is important to keep in mind when tallying up your results. Consider this: The normal Moon squaring normal L1, followed by the Moon sextile to L11, is a substantial difference. The benefit to the favorite (Moon to L1) will be more than the subsequent benefit to the dog (Moon to L11).

26

Let us look once more at this chart. Notice Venus L8 on the 7th cusp. A planet on a cusp will strengthen or weaken a team depending on location. In this case, Venus is for the dog, and normal Venus is on a dog cusp too (Descendant). A normal Venus here will slightly strengthen the dog as one of its own planets is nearby its most important cusp.

This is L8, so it is not a lot, but it should be observed. It would not be enough to swing the game toward the underdog, as we have calculated good things for this favorite here, but I want you to get used to spotting such points. When L1 or L7 is involved though, it can be a most potent effect.

The planet must be within 2 degrees of the house cusp. It is the closeness that counts. Simply being somewhere in that house does not matter.

Let us continue with more planet on cusp examples.

27

A new chart here: With an 18 Gem ASC, we see Lord 1 Mercury in Gem within 2 degrees of the 1st house.

This greatly strengthens the favorite in this game! It would take a whole lot of other factors boosting the dog or a couple very powerful individual items for the dog to have a chance in this one. And even so, with strong L1 on the 1st cusp, I would decline to bet the dog when the favorite has such an obvious lift.

This is an interesting chart with a 9 Aqu ASC. It really benefits one team.

Do you agree?

28

Can you see two excellent advantages for the underdog? Absolutely!

First, take a look at the Sun in this 9 Aqu ASC chart. The Sun is L7. The Sun is aspecting an angle axis. The Sun as the most important lord, L7, is trine the ASC-DSC axis within 2 degrees. A very strong indication for the dog!

Second, the Moon is moving to conjunct L7 Sun. In about 2 degrees of motion, the Moon and the Sun will be exact in longitude: Yet another big lift for the underdog!

To top it off, note Venus is square the MC, good for the dog too. Though Libra (the sign Venus rules) is not on the 8th cusp (this is called an intercepted sign), it is still in the 8th house and L8 as well; we should note it still belongs to the dog too.

So we have two huge pluses for the dog and a third decent one. Wow, this game is going to surprise a whole lot of people when the dog wins in an upset. But not you!

Let's keep rolling. Here we see Venus again in this new chart with 20 Sag on the ASC. Venus is L10 now, so in this chart Venus is on the favorite's side. It is just outside the 7th cusp within 2 degrees.

A planet (L1 and L7 for strongest effect) just outside the opponent's 1st or 7th house cusp dominates for that team.

In this 20 Sag ASC chart, L10 Venus for the favorite is dominating the dog by being just outside the dog's 7

th cusp. It is smothering the dog's main house, and this gives the favorite an edge throughout the game (on top of naturally being the favorite already).

29

A fresh chart here. This chart looks identical to the last one, doesn't it?

In fact, there is one very important distinction.

This is 7 minutes clock time earlier. Now we have an 18 Sag ASC chart. Check out Venus once more. L10

Venus is now inside the 7th house cusp. It is in the grip of the dog just inside the dog's house, and this is a hinderance for the favorite! Were this Lord 1, the favorite would be in more severe trouble. But as L10, it is still very weakening for the fav and gives an improved chance for the dog.

A planet (L1 and L7 for strongest effect) just inside the opponent's main house cusp (L7 or L1) is weakening for that planet's team. Remember these are important rules. But they are not everything! We must always evaluate the whole chart and get the whole story! We know Venus L10 here just inside the 7th cusp hurts the fav. What if we had some Moon-planet aspects as well? Not all the planets are in this chart, so picture the following in your mind. If we had one good Moon-Planet aspect in this second chart, say a Moon square L1 Jupiter that was helping the fav, and that team was a strong -170 favorite, I would be very hesitant to bet. This is because we would have conflicting statements that gave energy to both the dog and the fav in the game: L10 Venus inside the 7th cusp (bad for fav), Moon square L1 Jupiter (good for fav). We always want as many reasons as possible for one team. If however, we had another strong Moon-Planet aspect for the dog, such as a Moon square L7 Mercury which would help the dog, in addition to this bad position for Venus hurting the favorite and again helping the dog, that generates two good factors for the underdog in the game. I would then be highly inclined to bet the dog with the points (such as +0.25 +140 in soccer, +6 in the NFL, +5 in NBA, etc.), and would consider a try at a moneyline wager as well. This is the art of assembling and weighing the factors. And now you have just completed the first steps on your voyage exploring the importance of the Moon in sports event charts, both in Moon-planet connections and Moon-angle aspects. You have also seen the importance of planet to angle aspects and planets on important house cusps! Nice job! With a detailed eye, you may have noticed a new point subtly work its way into the last few charts. The black circle with the X through it, many of you know, is called the Part of Fortune. Here it is at 6 Gemini.

30

It is not a visible point but a mathematical one.

Your astrology program will automatically calculate it for you. It is extremely important in the Stellar Wheelhouse system. The formula for POF = Ascendant + Moon - Sun. The point is determined by starting on the ascendant, adding the Moon degrees and subtracting the Sun degrees. We always use the same POF fixed formula for all charts day or night. This is the more ancient method, used by historical astrologers such as Ptolemy and Ibn Ezra.

31

The POF is treated just like a planet for our use. Keep it stationary like one. It does in fact hold a secret to unlocking many games in your betting career. And as I will explain soon enough, it caused me sorrow and angst for several years beyond any sensible amount a mathematical point ever should! That is until I uncovered its mystery.

As an inquisitive reader, you are probably contemplating something right now. Something about "To what team do we give the POF?" "What planet would be the ruler of the POF?"

Here is my reply: The POF isn't directly given to either team.

Huh? So how do we know if it benefits the favorite or dog?

For Moon to POF aspects, the type of aspect determines whether it is helping the fav or dog.

Moon normal conjunct, sextile, or trine POF = fav.

Moon normal square or opposite POF = dog.

You read that correctly. Glance at the chart below.

32

The Moon is at 17 Cancer. The POF is at 18 Aries. The Moon will therefore square the POF in just over 1 degree.

Refer to the bold guide I just provided, and you will see that the Moon square the POF is for the dog.

Therefore, this considerably helps the underdog in the game, specifically about 1/5 of the way through the game (if this was a 48 minute NBA game, then this would be beneficial for the underdog nearing the end of the 1st quarter and start of the 2nd quarter period).

Here we see the Moon at 6 Aries and the POF at 10 Sag. The Moon will trine the POF in 4 degrees. Refer to the bold guide I provided again, and you will see that the Moon trine the POF is for the favorite. This will strongly benefit the favorite in this game. As it is near the end of the game's travel for the Moon, you would generally expect a big favorite push in the final quarter of the game.

Moon to POF aspects, much like Moon-planet conjunctions, are a strong factor in the game that pulls a lot of weight for that team. You still must always look the full Moon distance, but it is good to keep mindful.

You will get to know the Part of Fortune very well in your sports betting studies.

33

This chart has 12 Leo on the Ascendant. Is this a good setup for the favorite or the underdog?

Let us examine step by step. Since I've just introduced the Part of Fortune, let's start there! We have the Moon conjunct POF. That benefits the favorite (Moon-POF conjunctions, sextiles and trines are the normal ones benefiting the favorites, remember)!

Do you see another lift for the favorite here? Definitely! L1 Sun conjunct the Ascendant. Recall that a planet on an angle will have an impact. Here the Sun is the top favorite planet and on its own angle.

That is excellent for the favorite's chances! The fav is going to be primed and aggressive in this matchup.

A very robust game to consider the favorite for extra profit with these two very strong chart materials on its side.

Quick note: What if the Moon were at 29°30' Gemini here instead? 5 degrees of motion would result in the Moon changing signs into Cancer. And then its 5 degree travel would include the Moon at 3 Gemini squaring Mars at 3 Virgo. Would we count the square with Mars at the end of its trek at 03 Cancer?

Yes, we follow what it would do in the next sign. I've found it still counts all the same.

34

And there we have it! Nice job! This concludes the first section of Stellar Wheelhouse. I trust you are finding this pretty smooth so far. Feel free to review the key points again and take your time with the example charts.

As appreciation for diligently reading through Part I, how about a heartfelt yet entirely non-redeemable certificate!

35

In fact, this certificate is quite important. It shows you know the basics of Stellar Wheelhouse. As you develop your skills and incorporate Part II and Part III into your arsenal, your ability to read a chart actually will be redeemable for value, in the form of legitimate tangible winnings from your sports bets.

We shall keep going!

PART II - ARRANGEMENT AND ORDER

Do you know Steve Ballmer? Former Microsoft CEO. Current owner of the NBA Los Angeles Clippers. You may have seen a video or two with him over the years. I would like you to get online right now and search two videos for "Steve Ballmer developers" and "Steve Ballmer runs on stage." I mean how could you be anything but curious after seeing this profusely sweating bald man below?

Did you watch the 2 very short videos? Nice. Now please watch the developers video one more time.

You know you want to, and besides, it is under 60 seconds.

Ok fantastic. This is the point: I want you to replace his word, Developers, with DISPOSITORS. That is right, I want you to stand up, clap your hands, and increasingly yell dispositors, dispositors, dispositors, DISPOSITORS, DISPOSITORS, DISPOSITORS!

This is the passion and intensity you need to have for dispositors in my sports betting method. It is absolutely 100% required knowledge to fully understand the status via dispositors of ALL the planets and the Part of Fortune in these sports charts. Hey, this is part II, we are now in the intermediate portion of our program! I am turning up the heat!

36

Your level of shirt-drenching and hamstring-pulling is optional.

This "dispositor" word. What is it?

A dispositor is a planet that rules the sign that another planet is located in.

Huh? Exactly, how about another way to describe it...

Using astrology dictionary definitions, in Latin, dispositor means "arranger" and ultimately derives from disponere ("to arrange" or "to set in order"). That verb joins the prefix dis- ("apart" or "in different directions") with ponere ("to put"). The dispositor is a planet that "disposes" another planet. The dispositor controls the power or influence of the other planet.

And let me explain it one more way. A planet is dependent on its dispositor for its status in a chart. A planet's dispositor is like its boss. The boss' mood in the planetary office dictates the mood of his/her underlings.

So based on this, let's return to an earlier section where I pointed out which planets rule which signs.

Here is our RULERSHIP LIST again:

1 Mars 2 _____ 3 Mercury

4 Moon 5 Sun 6 _____

7 Venus 8 Pluto 9 Jupiter

0 Saturn - Uranus = Neptune

(Yes I will be getting to Taurus and Virgo! I know, the tension is palpable...)

A reminder of the signs and symbols:

1 Aries 2 Taurus 3 Gemini 4 Cancer

5 Leo 6 Virgo 7 Libra 8 Scorpio

9 Sagittarius 0 Capricorn - Aquarius = Pisces

Time to put on your thinking cap...

Let us say Mars is in Gemini. What planet rules Gemini? Looking above, we see that is Mercury. This means in this case that Mercury is the dispositor of Mars, because Mercury is the planet that rules the sign of Gemini. It is the boss of Gemini in this case, and therefore the boss of Mars, since Mars is in Gemini.

37

Make sense? Good, try some more:

Saturn in Sagittarius. Its dispositor is Jupiter.

Moon in Libra. The Moon's dispositor is Venus.

Mercury in Pisces. Mercury's dispositor is Neptune.

Sun in Leo. Its dispositor is...the Sun. No boss here, the Sun runs his own show in his own sign.

Venus in Cancer. Her dispositor is the Moon.

Okay. Simple enough.

For people who have some astrology familiarity, Venus in Taurus does NOT mean she is in her own sign.

It must be judged on the flow of dispositors in Stellar Wheelhouse.

Mercury in Virgo does NOT mean he is in his own sign. It too must be judged on the flow of dispositors.

Mars in Scorpio does NOT mean Mars controls the sign. Mars must be judged based on Pluto.

Saturn in Aquarius does NOT mean Saturn is at home. Saturn must be assessed based on Uranus.

And so on. The rulership list is very important.

Everything cool so far? Very good.

Now we will take it a step further.

I return to our first example: Mars in Gemini. Traditional astrology says the planets have rulership, exaltation, triplicity, term and face. These are systems of sub-rulership of portions of a sign.

That sort of thing can get complicated. And happily, we need very little from that set of methodologies to get our sports job done.

38

Now we focus: with this 21 Aqu ASC zodiac wheel, take a look at Mars in Gemini. What is Mars' status here?

What does that mean? It means we need to look at Mars' dispositor. This means we look at the Mars boss in this chart - Mercury - for Mars' mood. In other words, how is the boss doing today?

So we must find the boss' FULL status in our chart. We go to Mercury. And in our chart, we see that Mars' boss, Mercury, is in Leo. Ok. So is that "good" or "bad"?

In other words, how do we determine the boss Mercury's status in the chart?

That is right, we need to go to HIS boss. Mercury is in Leo, so HIS boss here is the Sun.

Where is the Sun? The Sun is in Leo. In its own sign. This is a NORMAL status for the Sun.

You may have noticed I seeded the word "normal" a number of times in the book before now.

And here is why.

The Sun will operate here with NORMAL effect. In any connections the Sun makes with an angle or in a Moon-Sun aspect, the Sun will bring a 'NORMAL' to that connection. This is the terminology I use when a planet or point will act as expected. All our previous exercises have been conducted with all planets as NORMAL.

39

So the Sun is normal. Let us now find the Mars status. To do that, we simply go backwards! Since Sun is normal, Mercury is normal, and because Mercury is normal, Mars is normal. That is our answer = Mars is NORMAL in this chart. Told from another perspective: the Sun is fine, so his underling Mercury is fine. Mercury is fine, so his underling Mars is fine = normal.

Mars in Gemini→Mercury in Leo→Sun in Leo.

Sun was normal, thus→Mercury is normal, thus→Mars is normal.

I trust that makes sense to you!

Let us do another one. This is so very important. But this time as a thought experiment, no pictures!

We want to find out the Moon's status in two charts:

Chart 1. The Moon is in Libra, 03 Libra to be exact. Ok, easy, we simply go to Venus. Venus rules the sign of Libra, and the Moon is in Libra. Venus is the Moon's boss here. And we find Venus in Libra.

Venus is normal there, the best happy sign for Venus to do her job. Thus Venus is normal, so Moon in

Libra is NORMAL.

Right on? Right on.

Now clear your mind. We envision another chart.

Chart 2. The Moon is at 03 Libra again. Ok, easy, we simply go to Venus again. We find Venus in Aries.

Hmm, that is Venus' WORST sign, as it is opposite Libra the sign it rules. We must check Venus' boss Mars. We find Mars in Sagittarius.

That is far enough, because we see Mars is in a sign that cannot help Venus. Venus is therefore a status of REVERSE in our chart. This is the terminology I use when a planet or point will do the REVERSE of expected (this has nothing to do with Retrograde Rx). In any connections

Venus makes with an angle or in a Moon-Venus aspect, Venus here will bring a 'REVERSE' to that connection (I chose 'reverse' as the term long ago, because 'opposite' has other meaning in astrology, and makes sense to me).

And since Venus is reverse as the boss, going back to our original Moon focus in Chart 2, that means the Moon in Libra IS REVERSE in this chart.

That means for EVERY MOON ASPECT in our hypothetical Chart 2, the Moon will provide a REVERSE to the effect! This is the secret and it is that simple!

40

Continue our thought experiment: In this imaginary Chart 2 where our Moon at 03 Libra is REVERSE, imagine this Moon at 03 Libra squares L1 Sun at 05 Leo.

Remember, the Moon is REVERSE.

The Sun is Lord 1, the sign on the ascendant and the main planet for the favorite.

Thus the Sun is NORMAL being in his own sign.

This gives us the following aspect = reverse Moon square normal Sun.

Reverse * normal = REVERSE.

The reverse Moon square normal Sun aspect is REVERSE and will HURT THE FAVORITE, not help it!

Again, this is the secret and it is that simple!

Think of it like the distributive property when you multiply numbers.

A positive times a positive is a positive. A positive times a negative is a negative.

In other words, a NORMAL times a NORMAL = NORMAL. A NORMAL times a REVERSE = REVERSE.

Imagine we have a coin with one side positive (normal) and one side negative (reverse).

Putting a reverse item into our equation is like flipping a coin to its other side!

I know from years of stock trading along with tons of "regular" astrology reading that there always is a reason hidden somewhere in the chart. Sometimes I am a bit dull-witted, so it took me many months (ahem, years) to wake up to the fact that a planet could change status. I figured Mars in Gemini was Mars in Gemini. It is not in its rulership, not in its detriment. Why should it ever change? It is neutral' and 'should' act normally all the time! And so Mars in Gemini would indeed act perfectly normally for a while. And then suddenly one random Tuesday, it acted exactly the opposite. Everything it touched turned rancid! It flipped the expectation for every team it was involved with when touching angles or mixing with the Moon! Believe me, when it starts hurting your account in the biggest of ways, you summon deep motivation to figure out why.

41

And one day it hit me. To be honest, I cannot recall what planetary pair made the realization crystallize. I believe it was Mars in Gemini. When Mars started going rogue and being "reverse" (this was before I coined the term), I thought I should look at what was happening with other things.

Did Mars make any weird planetary aspects? No, not really. And that typically should not matter (turns out 99% of the time, that is true, planet-planet aspects are not necessary for our work, unless we talk very advanced stuff). I mean, Mars in Gemini one day is fine, and Mars is Gemini the next day is absolutely wacky. What was going on?

I then wondered out loud, "I guess I could look at their signs, maybe that means something." But none of this was ever talked about in Frawley's work. He said nothing about signs. He talked about no houses besides 1,10,7,4. He had no angle aspects, and followed absolute old-school traditional rulership.) So no, cannot be!

But I became obsessed. SOMETHING had to be the causal agent of change in Mars acting so peculiarly.

Back to the brainstorming board I went. Ok, so Mars is in Gemini. Let me look at Mercury then, since Gemini is a Mercury sign... Mercury is in Leo.

Hmm, I thought Mercury in Leo was 'neutral'. So what? What is that about? And besides, Mercury was in Leo before Mars went weird, and after Mars went weird. Dang, guess that means nothing. Never mind, ugh.

Whoa. Wait! Hold the whole freakin' farm here!

The SUN changed signs right when Mars went wacko. It was in Leo and moved to Virgo. I know the Sun loves Leo. And wait a second...Mercury was in Leo. What is going on here?

Do you see how I started to figure it out? And I soon discovered this. For a planet's status the rule is:

To find a planet's status (Planet A), go through the dispositors to the first traditional planet in the chart. Find THAT planet's (Planet B) FULL status in the chart. Once Planet B status is known, THAT is Planet A status.

Mars was in Gemini. Let us go through the dispositor chain. We go to Mercury. We need to find

MERCURY's full status in the chart. Mercury was in Leo. Go to its dispositor, Sun. The Sun was in Leo when Mars was acting normally. With the Sun being in Leo, that meant Mercury was normal, and so Mars was normal.

Mars in Gemini→Mercury in Leo→Sun in Leo.

Sun was normal, thus→Mercury is normal, thus→Mars is normal.

Then the Sun moved to Virgo. The Sun moving into Virgo flipped the Sun to REVERSE (for a very specific reason that's not relevant at the moment). That meant Mercury had to be reverse; the Sun was Mercury's boss.

EVEN THOUGH MERCURY WAS STILL IN LEO, it suddenly switched from Normal to Reverse because the Sun, its dispositor, switched signs! And because Mercury was now reverse, that means MARS WAS REVERSE. THAT IS THE CONNECTION.

42

Mars in Gemini→Mercury in Leo→Sun in Virgo.

Sun was reverse, thus→Mercury is reverse, thus →Mars is reverse.

I could not believe it! I had really found something substantial. And from there, I started applying that thinking to all the planets.

Suddenly and wonderfully, a large portion of my earlier "mistakes" from wrong predictions made total sense. Old, saved charts proved valuable as I found exactly why for instance the dog suddenly blew the lead. It is because that last Moon aspect to the dog planet did not HELP the dog, it HURT it because it was REVERSE! The favorite scored first because that first Moon aspect hitting Lord 7 was a reversed planet; it HURT the dog and HELPED the favorite! And so on.

Dispositors are like gateways. I suspect they may be a primary cause of "inversions" in forecasts for stocks and markets. This is because you cannot give a blanket statement like 'Venus in Gemini' or 'Sun in Sagittarius' is always a certain way. Because the Venus in Gemini "normal" or "reverse" status, each time it comes around, will completely and constantly depend on Mercury's status. Mercury's status will change often because Mercury changes signs often. And Mercury's dispositor will also be switching from normal to reverse time to time. And when Venus moves to Cancer, its status will then constantly depend on the Moon status. So forth and so on for all the planets and their status. This information may have substantial ramifications for astrological-based stock and market forecasts-atlarge.

Now we know this can be tracked. Again, I know this NORMAL-REVERSE process is the real deal because I have seen it play out endlessly in sports events thousands of times. The answer is clear-cut and tangible. The sports games allow it to manifest very distinctly and unmistakably.

To find a planet's status (Planet A), go through the dispositor chain until you reach the first traditional planet in the chart. Find THAT planet's (Planet B) FULL status in the chart. Once Planet B status is known, THAT is Planet A status.

This is incredibly important; I will write it again with full detail.

To find a planet's status (Planet A), passthrough the dispositors going to the next planet in the dispositor chain, until you reach a planet ruling its own sign (in which case you can stop there) or the first traditional planet in the chart, Planet B (Moon, Sun, Merc, Ven, Mars, Jup, Sat). Find THAT planet's (Planet B) FULL status in the chart. Once Planet B status is known, THAT equals Planet A status.

When a planet is in a sign of detriment (the opposite sign from what it naturally rules), it is REVERSE.

When a planet is in a neutral sign and the planet's dispositor is reverse, that planet is also REVERSE.

Exception: If the planet is in a sign of detriment, and its dispositor is in its own sign of rulership, that keeps the planet NORMAL (Venus in Aries, Mars in Aries = Venus' dispositor is super happy and this 'saves' Venus, thus Venus is normal).

43

Here are some practice exercises. Find the Moon status for these examples.

Will the Moon be normal or reverse?

1. The Moon in 24 Pisces, Neptune in Pisces. Moon is NORMAL.

2. The Moon in 13 Leo, the Sun is in 11 Aries, Mars is at 20 Capricorn. Go through the chain:

Moon's boss Sun is in a sign where it is fine, and the Sun's boss is fine too for good measure, so the Moon is NORMAL.

3. The Moon in 13 Leo, Sun in Libra, Venus in Scorpio. The Sun is Libra is normally reverse, we check Sun's dispositor Libra. Nope, Venus is in bad shape too, so Sun is reverse, thus Moon is REVERSE. You see how you must judge every time based on all the planet positions! The Moon in Leo can be normal and at other times the Moon in Leo can be reverse!

4. The Moon in 04 Libra, Venus in Aries, Mars in Scorpio, Pluto in Leo. The Moon's dispositor is in her worst sign, and Venus' dispositor cannot save her as Mars is not in Aries. So Venus is reverse, and therefore Moon is REVERSE.

5. The Moon at 0 Aries, Mars in 25 Libra, Venus in Leo, Sun in Sag. Mars is in bad shape in his worst sign. The Moon is REVERSE.

6. The Moon in 20 Cancer. Moon is NORMAL.

7. The Moon in 09 Capricorn. Saturn in Capricorn. This is Saturn's best sign and 'saves' the Moon.

Moon here is NORMAL. If Sat would be in Leo for instance, with Sun not helping, then the Moon is reverse.

This will become second nature and a pretty simple process. Please do not go triple Virgo on me and get super-particular about all the details, 5 levels deep, trying to find weird exceptions at this moment! I know you are out there, ha! TRUST this dispositor process.

You will easily and quickly be able to calculate these with a little practice. Do not worry, it is manageable! You just need to keep your thinking organized. And you will see dozens and dozens more examples over the next pages.

On top of that, I have even better news. As you know, the Moon stays in a sign for 2-3 days, and weeks/months/years for the other planets. If we do not immediately know the Normal or Reverse status of a planet right away: they will tell us themselves! They will give us the answer.

We simply watch games in the new sign and wait for some Moon aspects and planet aspects to angles.

The game results, the timing of the scoring: these will let us know if the aspect helped the favorite or helped the underdog. We collate these over a set of games and we are set, we have confidence of our planet status. So stay relaxed and onward we travel!

44

Time to see more wheels. Rather exciting, right?
For this 25 Gemini Ascendant chart, the Moon in Cancer = normal. Neptune in Pisces = normal. It has been nice having Neptune in Pisces since that makes calculation easy for the planet.
Now take a careful look at Neptune at 08 Pisces. See the little red Rx sign?
Rx = Retrograde. That means the planet is moving backwards through the zodiac from our perspective on Earth. Time for the next crucial rule in Stellar Wheelhouse.
An Rx Planet AUTOMATICALLY ADDS A REVERSE to the planet status.
What does our Moon trine Neptune aspect do here? We can break it down in simple steps.
The Moon is normal in its favorite sign. The Moon is always direct as well (the Moon will never be Rx).
Neptune is always normal in Pisces but currently is Rx in our chart, so Neptune is (norm*rev) = reverse.

45

Let us put together our equation: Normal Moon trine reverse Neptune = reverse. Neat, right?
Neptune is for the favorite as L10, so this connection will HURT THE FAVORITE and HELP THE DOG.
The Moon in this 26 Cap Ascendant wheel is now sextile Neptune. Neptune is L2, still for the favorite, again in Pisces and Rx, so it is reverse.
But Moon is in Capricorn. The Moon hates Capricorn and is always reverse in status unless its dispositor Saturn is very strong in Cap or Saturn's boss is in its own sign. Saturn is not strong here (let's say Jupiter is not helping), so the Moon is reverse.
So that would mean Reverse Moon and Reverse Neptune. What happens when two negatives form an aspect? Reverse aspecting reverse = NORMAL.
Yes, negative times negative is a positive = normal! The distributive property again. Consider it like a coin starting normal side up, getting flipped with one negative, then flipped again with another negative back to the normal side!
Here, Reverse Moon sextile reverse Nep = normal = HELPS NEPTUNE L2 = HELPS THE FAVORITE.
Say what now? Why would a reverse planet aspecting another reverse planet do this and become normal? It sounds crazy, huh?

46

After tens of thousands of games and hundreds of thousands of aspects, I can assure you this is how it works. It took me a long time to figure it out.
Here we see two Rx (retrograde) planets, Mercury and Saturn. Since Mercury is Rx, that means it is REVERSE. Even though in its best sign, the Rx creates a REVERSE status for Mercury (normal sign * reverse Rx = reverse). The core status and the Rx are separate factors to put together to determine the planet's full status of normal or reverse.
For any Rx planet aspecting an angle, remember to use this in combination with the essential status to determine the planet's full individual status.
Quick question: What if Mercury were in Sagittarius and Rx? That equation would be reverse * reverse = NORMAL. And Mercury would be treated as normal status. Mercury hates being in Sag and would always be reverse status in Sag, irrespective of Rx, UNLESS its dispositor Jupiter was in Sag itself or its boss was super happy in its own sign.

See in this 10 Virgo ASC chart that Mercury is tightly square the Asc-Dsc.
But wait, Mercury is at 11
Gemini, you say, and the Ascendant is at 10 Virgo. Isn't Mercury past that exact aspect and therefore not valid?

47

If Mercury were direct in motion, yes you would be correct, all the juice would almost be gone from that aspect. But Mercury is Rx!
Mercury is moving from 11 backward toward 10 degrees! It is thus applying to square the Ascendant. As reverse Mercury is L10 for the favorite, this reverse status will HURT the favorite.

The logic continues to function in this 22 Scorpio Ascendant chart. Venus Rx is in the 2nd house in this chart, trine the Asc-Dsc axis. Venus is in Capricorn. Look toward the dispositor Saturn. Saturn is in Aries.
That is bad for Saturn (and bad for Venus naturally too) and therefore makes Venus reverse. This gives us Venus being reverse and Rx. As shown before, Rx counts as a reverse.
Reverse sign* reverse Rx = normal.

It is true, a planet in detriment and Rx equals normal!

So we can break it down like this for planets:

Rx and normal status = reverse.

Rx and reverse status = normal.

Direct planet (no Rx) and normal status = normal.

Direct planet (no Rx) and reverse status = reverse.

48

Let us complete a few examples in our head.

Saturn Rx and in Capricorn. Reverse * normal = Saturn is reverse.

Jupiter direct in Pisces (Neptune in Pisces). Norm * norm = Jupiter is normal.

Mars direct in Leo (Sun in Gemini, Mercury in Sag, Jup in Libra) = Mars is reverse. We need Mars' boss

(the Sun) full status, so we go to Mercury. Mercury is reverse in Sag, and Jupiter cannot save Mercury.

Mercury is rev, so Sun is rev, so Mars is normal * reverse = Mars is reverse.

Venus Rx and in Sco (Pluto in Sag, Jupiter no help). Reverse * reverse =
Venus is normal.

As there are endless permutations, I cannot list every combination of planets in their signs and dispositors to determine all normal and reverse combos. I have not seen them all!

I have given the foundation rules, the template if you will, and those are the guidelines to follow them all out. It has worked for me for many years with excellent results.

And do remember that the chart and the game flow will give you the answers for the planets in question! If a planet has just changed sign, no need to rush in. Be patient, watch some games where that planet is active on angle or with the moon, and you will know.

I see someone from far away with their hand up? Yes, please go ahead.

He asks "I want to solve for the status of Planet Y. So if planet Y's dispositor, call it Planet Z, is normal and Rx, then Planet Z is definitely reverse. Because normal*reverse equals reverse" Yes, that is correct for Planet Z, indeed.

"And since Planet Z is reverse by being normal along with Rx, then is Planet Y reverse?", he concludes.

Ah, an excellent point! Let us rephrase the question inserting real planets.
We want to find Mercury's status. Mercury is in Capricorn. We go to Saturn to find Saturn's full status in the chart, per our fundamental rule. Saturn is in Capricorn and Rx. That means Saturn is reverse status for its own purposes (Sat in Cap in norm and Rx is rev, so norm*rev = rev). The answer for solving Mercury's status here is: Retrograde is only relevant to the planet ACTUALLY IN Rx status. The Rx does not get carried to its underling Mercury! When a planet is Rx, that planet does NOT pass on its Rx status to another planet it disposes (to a planet it rules). The Rx is used in calculation for its OWN norm/rev status, but the Rx is not used in dispositor chain calculation for others. Consequently, Mercury would be NORMAL in this situation. Make sense? Since Saturn is in Capricorn, Saturn is normal for Mercury's purposes, so Mercury is normal. Now, Saturn Rx in Cap would indeed be reverse when it is involved in a Moon aspect or when aspecting an angle. Let me provide an example. Say we had normal Moon square this Saturn Rx in Capricorn. And say Saturn is L1. This means Saturn is for the favorite. This Saturn is in Cap and Rx, which equals reverse for its pairing with the Moon aspect.

49

Norm moon square rev Saturn = reverse = HURTS Lord 1, so it HURTS the fav, HELPS the dog. As you review this material repeatedly, it will all start to click. I promise this will become intuitive and natural to calculate these Moon-Planet aspect combos. You will find the norm/rev status and the teams they are for and be on your way to cracking the code in these sports charts. Whew, how are you holding up? This may seem like some tricky material but consider that you are seeing all this for the very first time! Time for a breather, have a laugh (or a groan) and read some absolutely corny star and space jokes I have collected! Ooh I have searched far and wide for these pearls of wisdom. Q: What did the last-place star win in the lightspeed race? A: A constellation prize. Q: Why didn't the Dog Star laugh at the joke? A: It was too Sirius. Q: What type of songs do the planets sing? A: Nep-tunes.

Ooof. Yeah, I am not above putting stock-image smileys in this book to distract you from my puns. After those clunkers, you are probably ready for more of the chart details and less of the dumb jokes.

50

Do recognize these steps are like building blocks. They are very logical pieces. Much like you learned to add, subtract, multiply and divide, then moved on to algebra and beyond, these too are the fundamentals that will hold fast and true and serve as the baseline for your predictions in all charts:

1. Finding all the moon-planet and moon-POF aspects.
2. Determining the normal or reverse status of all the planets you need in a chart.
3. Distinguishing the normal and reverse results of the Moon-Planet and Moon-POF aspects.
4. Looking at any planet aspects to key angles and planets to POF.
5. Counting how many of all those are for the favorite side and how many are for the underdog side.

6. Assessing those strengths and placing your bet. These are the essential ingredients to judge your sports charts smoothly and swiftly with both precision and accuracy. You will develop speed as your familiarity increases. And as you stay consistent with weeks and months of chart review, you will see the ebbs and flows of the games and you will sense how each planet works on a day-to-day basis because you see them in the same sign repeatedly. The more consistently you follow the major games, the better you will recognize the planets and the setups both improving and damaging the teams in their matches. I go through a typical 10 to 15 set of individual game charts for a current day in about 30 minutes or so. I do a first pass if you will, typing them in taking and look and identifying the general setups. I highlight some that look like good bets while ruling out most other games entirely. Then I more carefully go through the starred ones again to doublecheck all my calculations and counts. Maybe another 10 minutes; a little longer if I want to compare to old things or do a deep review if there are more involved charts with lots going on. Sometimes I have 3-5 bets out of 12 games, sometimes just 1 or 2, and occasionally, none of them are that hot, so I pass entirely. I wait closer to gametime on most days as time permits, go to the betting sites to be sure the fav and dog are still the same, do one final check of the charts, and place my bets.

51
"Melody walks through the door, and memory flies out the window.

Nobody knows what they want 'til they finally let it all go."

Commissioned from the Sèvres Imperiale Manufactory by Napoleon Bonaparte, Paris, 1813.

This clock replicated the 144-foot triumphal column in the Place Vendôme in Paris, commemorating Napoleon's victory at the 1805 Battle of Austerlitz. Presented as a gift to his top general.

On display at the Nelson-Atkins Museum, Kansas City, Missouri

Square ormolu base with winged lion paw feet. Bleu-de-roi porcelain decorated in gold with Zodiac signs flanking one column side; 12 Zodiac hieroglyphs on opposite column side.

In lower section floats a band of angels below the numbers 1-12.

"The bravest of the brave." 131 cm x 29 cm x 29 cm.

52

The Part of Fortune, continued

Let us talk more about the Part of Fortune. You recall earlier in the text our POF rules were:

Moon conjunct, sextile, or trine POF = fav.

Moon square or opposite POF = dog.

This is wholly correct and is our core fundamental knowledge base. This applies when planets and points are normal.

Think back to the recent pages in this book. You have recently learned that the Moon status can be normal or reverse. You also have learned the planets can be normal or reverse. The combination of the Moon status and planet status in aspect give the final determination if the aspect can be counted as Normal or Reverse, and thus helping the favorite or the underdog.

So, what happens with a Moon trine POF aspect when we have a reverse Moon?

We know that normally, Moon trine POF is for the favorite.

What happens if a reverse Moon enters the equation?

Yes, it really is as simple as you may be thinking!

A reverse moon conjunct POF is for the UNDERDOG.

A reverse moon sextile POF is also for the UNDERDOG.
A reverse moon applying to trine POF is also for the UNDERDOG.
Reverse aspecting normal = REVERSE. The same rules apply.
For the POF square and opposition aspects: Our baseline normal rules say the Moon square or Moon opposite POF = dog.
So...what does that mean if a reverse Moon squares or opposes the POF? Yep, you have figured it out again!

A reverse moon applying to square the POF is for the FAVORITE.
A reverse moon applying to oppose the POF is for the FAVORITE.
Once you know the NORMAL fundamentals, it is simple to determine the answer for your planet aspect duo. It is just the flipped answer! Understanding the POF FULLY is exceptionally necessary because it moves so quickly throughout the day; as fast as the ascendant but all around the wheel. This means the POF is involved with a lot of your game calculations.

53

Here are a few chart examples. Above, the Moon is in Cancer opposite the POF. The Moon is normal, so norm Moon opposite POF = norm = dog.
The Moon in this chart is in Pisces and the POF is in Cancer. That is an applying trine. Moon is normal because its dispositor Neptune is normal in Pisces. Norm Moon trine POF = norm = fav.

Parenthetically, note that in my full sports chart template in Solar Fire (and in the item described in this book's 2025 Addendum), I have a Moon aspects section that provides all the Moon contacts within 5 degrees automatically. I am only showing the wheels for now to give you practice seeing the aspects. If you do not know the "distances" between signs, you will learn them in time, have confidence.

54

It will become ingrained in your memory that Sag and Pisces are square, that Taurus and Virgo and Cap are trine one another, that Aries and Libra are opposite, and so on (until then, count 2 signs over for sextiles, count 3 for squares, count 4 for trines, and 6 for oppositions). Here the Moon is in Gemini and the POF in Virgo. This is a Moon square POF. Is the Moon normal or reverse here? We need to look at the Moon's dispositor. Looking at the Moon's boss, we see Mercury in Sagittarius. That is Mercury's worst sign! Now look to Mercury's boss Jupiter. Jupiter is in Scorpio. He cannot save Mercury and Mercury is indeed reverse. Thus our Moon is reverse.
So this results in Reverse Moon square POF = reverse. Rather than helping the underdog, this aspect helps the favorite.

Very good, very good indeed. I went along swimmingly with this, enjoying success and continued profitable streaks. I had solved the normal/reverse matter for planet status and felt like I had accomplished something significant.
But once again the charts provided new challenges. The POF aspects were dang tricky! Even though I solved the essential planet statuses, the POF seemed to flip itself at "random" intervals. A good-as-gold normal moon square POF would consistently give the expected response for the underdog, as it should.
But then a few days in a row, it would abruptly be exactly the reverse of what I expected.

55

Oh geez not again, I thought. But the game timing was perfect. The boost for a team was absolutely, positively due to the Moon-POF aspect. You want to hear some intriguing news about the POF and the SHORT version of my story (the long version was very serpentine and arduous!)? I know, this is not a biography, it is a guidebook to sports betting with one-chart astrology. If I simply gave you all the rules all at once however, I think it would be a disservice and you would wonder how in the world they came to be. Clearly there was a mystery to the Part of Fortune. Indeed, why was the energy flipping to the other team, flouting my 'fundamental rules', only just for the Moon to POF aspects? Tracking the POF treasure So after some thought, I said hey no problem. I bet the POF reverses based on its dispositor and therefore its sign too! I mean, why not, it does that for the planets, right? Then it surely must do it for this chart point, as a planet's status is massively significant. Perhaps the POF has a status as well. I decided I would use the POF dispositor. Why did I not think of that before? Piece of cake. I gave that a dedicated commitment to track and study. Ooooh, but no. No it does not. That does NOT work by itself. I was stymied. After a long period of frustration, I decided to go back-to-basics. Like all things in a chart, I KNEW the answer was in there. And so, what is the POF again? Yes, it is the mathematical point in space. But there is more. $POF = Ascendant + Moon - Sun$. The point involves the Moon. And it involves the Sun. Ha! What the heck, I was feeling crazy and adventurous one day, so let me try this...I will look at the Sun status in the chart. I will look at the Moon status in the chart. And then for added measure, I will look at the POF sign status in the chart as if it were a planet itself too, like I originally thought. In essence, I will think of the POF as a trio: a 3-in-one combo with the Moon, Sun and POF together. And I will take the individual normal and reverse conditions for each one of the trio and decide the 'POF Final' status based on that. You know, like if Sun is normal, Moon is reverse, and POF in Sag (with Jupiter in Sag) is normal, that would be (norm*rev*norm) = reverse. That would give me a Final POF of reverse.

56

Why not. Let me see here... Hey, it worked on the first chart I examined. Ah, cool. But totally coincidence. Just a coin flip, really. Let me try another chart. Huh, it worked again. Probably just a lucky streak, ya know, 1 in 4 chance. I have a bunch of charts in this digital pile over here, I'll check 'em out with this idea. Wait a second.. HOLY MOTHER OF URANUS. IT WORKED. EVERY. FREAKING. TIME. This was a total breakthrough. With absolute definitive confidence in thousands of charts, this is the way to calculate what I call the POF FINAL status. To calculate the POF status, you take the Sun status, the Moon status, and the POF in Sign Status. Put those 3 items together to create your POF FINAL status.

It is just like calculating a Moon-Planet aspect. With those, two norms is a norm. One norm and a rev is a rev. Two revs are a norm. You simply do that process here as well, but with 3 items for the POF! You calculate the Moon norm/rev status, the Sun norm/rev, and the POF in Sign norm/rev. Then you put them together: It is like a mini 3 aspect combo all in one point! A norm*norm*norm = norm. A rev*rev*rev = rev. A norm*norm*rev = rev. A rev*rev*norm = norm. The same distributive property applies! It is absolute magic! The POF treasure at last.

57

Since the POF Final status is securely known, this solves for all the Moon-POF aspects. Check it out:

A norm Moon to norm POF final = normal.

A norm Moon to reverse POF final = reverse.

A reverse Moon to norm POF final = reverse.

A reverse Moon to reverse POF final = normal.

Recall our NORMAL rules once more.

Normal Moon conjunct, sextile, or trine Normal POF = fav.

Normal Moon square or opposite Normal POF = dog.

Here are some example combinations you will see in a chart:

Norm Moon square Norm POF final. That is normal, and a normal square Moon-POF aspect is for the dog, so this is for the dog.

Norm Moon sextile Rev POF final. That is reverse, so instead of for the fav, this is for the dog.

Rev Moon trine Rev POF final. That equals normal, and Moon trine POF equals fav, so this is for the fav.

Rev Moon opposite Norm POF. That equals reverse. Instead of helping the dog, this helps the fav.

The POF touching an angle can be safely ignored. That is correct. No need to mind the POF when near angles.

The POF does also CAST aspects. Treat it just like a planet.

In general: if the POF is normal, any conj-sext-trine aspect to the angle is good for the favorite. Flipped if reverse.

If the POF is normal, any squ-opp aspect to the angle is good for the dog.

Flipped if reverse.

Pretty cool, huh? I think so, but I am biased because I found out all these rules. I do declare I have Mars in Virgo... but better to not tell anybody. Despite that, I consider myself fun in person. I will not bore you and glaze your eyes in tidal waves of trivial detail.

58

But seriously, you have one big question on your mind. I can hear it from way over here.

"WHEN ARE WE GETTING TO THE GAMES? MY GOD MAN."

I think Gann said that you need to use everything all the time. And so it is here. No fret, they are coming.

Lots and lots of game charts are soon in these pages. I need to build up the rules set in full for you without drowning you by drinking from the fire hose. This is because the games use all the points and all the rules. Miss one or two, and you will miss a piece of the energy puzzle, which can be enough to tilt the game balance.

Oh, you are getting louder. What is that you say? You really want some game charts?

Alright, I give in! I see that you have lots of, ahem, energy!

Let us run through a few games. You have been working hard. Time to put it into practice. Are you up for the challenge? Ok right on. Give this one a spin. Study it for a few minutes and make a prediction.

59

60

Chicago Cubs +100 v San Diego Padres -120. The Cubs at +100 were a slight underdog to the Padres at

-120. Go ahead and start the chart reading process.

Do you see Mercury? Mercury is Lord 7 for the underdog. That is the most important planet for the dog.

And Mercury is exactly square the MC. What is Mercury's status? Yes, Mercury is normal, because it's in its own favorite sign. So, squaring a big angle must really help that team, right? It is a big focus of the chart.

Are you sure? Mercury is Rx here. So that makes Mercury reverse! Remember normal*reverse = reverse! Just like our first practice chart. This means squaring the angle really HURTS the dog. Ouch, a bad way to start off for the underdog Cubs, as that is a strong detrimental effect weakening the Cubs and helping the favorite San Diego during the whole contest.

Ok, what else? The Moon is trine the MC. I will give you a hint and tell you the Moon is Reverse. Trust me for now. That must hurt the favorite, because we judge the Moon hitting angles from the fav perspective unless L7.

And this would be so, except the Moon has already passed the Midheaven! If the game started at 7:12pm, then yes it would have been important. But the game had a 7:10pm start time. This does NOT count as the Moon strength drops off very quickly after an exact aspect.

[Note that Solar Fire records this Moon aspect to the angles as applying with the A, .

That software has angles applying to the planets as their reference frame since angles move faster. We do NOT do that for Stellar Wheelhouse. Angles stay fixed at their original position and the Moon and planets move.

Now we conduct the always-standard practice of reviewing the Moon aspects within 5 degrees. The Moon sextiles Neptune in just over 1 degree. Rev Moon to norm Nep = reverse.

L4 is a dog house, so the reverse of that is for the fav. Another one for helping the fav! This will kick in early in the contest, within the first 2-3 innings for sure, and we have a strong early window for the favorite Padres.

The Moon finally trines Pluto in 4 ½ degrees. That is near the end of the game window, 8 th

-9

th inning. We already said the Moon is reverse. Pluto is in Cap, Saturn is in Aquarius. So we must find Saturn's full chart status. Trust me at this point that Saturn is reverse. So Pluto is reverse AND Rx. That means Pluto is normal (rev*rev=norm). Pluto is L12. Rev moon trine norm L12 Pluto = reverse = HURTS L12 = HURTS the dog (L12 always is for dog), meaning it HELPS the fav. This is another Moon aspect for the favorite!

That makes 3 excellent factors for San Diego: Rev Mercury square an angle all game, and 2 Moon aspects giving nice scoring chances at the beginning and end for the favorite. Our bet is San Diego -120.

Indeed, the favorite Padres scored early, led the whole game, scored late, and won 9:4.

61

62

Here is another MLB game between Houston -135 and Detroit.

You probably notice some more chart points here too. The Nodes are present. The North Node (downfacing horseshoe) and South Node are always a pair. And so is 'AX' and 'VX'. More to come on those!

Right away we see the Moon is trine the ASC within 1 degree.

Is the Moon normal or reverse?

The Moon is in Gemini. Its dispositor is Mercury, who is in Aries.

Mercury's boss is Mars, who is also in Aries. This is Mars' favorite sign.

Mars is normal, thus Mercury is normal, thus the Moon is normal!

That's a great start for the favorite. Is there anything else?

The Moon goes on to square L5 Neptune in 2 degrees. That's a tiny help for the favorite as well.

With nothing much else exciting going on, we can safely go with Houston -135.

That means $100 wagered on Houston would win $174, for an additional $74.

In baseball, there is always a Runline bet of -1.5. That means you need the team to win by 2 runs or more. The payout is much better at +120. That means your $100 wager would return $220 for a profit of $120.

You can always stay more moderate with a moneyline bet at -135. It depends how confident you feel about the strength of the chart for the favorite. Here, I went with the standard ML at -135.

It was looking a little rough after 7 innings with Houston down 2:1. But the Moon usually comes through, and the Astros scored 4 runs in the top of the 8th to win 5:2.

63

64

This is the first game of the 2017 NFL season between the Indianapolis Colts and the Los Angeles Rams.

The Rams were favored by 3 points (-3).

At first glance, we see three aspects in the Moon Aspects window. First Moon trine Normal Pluto Rx.

This Moon is normal (we will discuss Taurus soon). Pluto is normal but Rx, so that equals reverse. Norm

Moon *Rev Pluto = Rev. That hurts L12 the dog, so this helps the favorite Rams a decent amount early in the game.

Next Moon trine L9 Sun. We ignore L3-L9 Moon aspects.

Lastly Moon square L11 Venus. L11 is always the planet with the least effect for the dog. But it's still something. The Moon and Sun are in Taurus and Virgo respectively (both of those heathen signs) and they are both normal in this chart. Norm Moon to Norm Venus = norm = a tiny bit for the dog.

Ok, 1 each for the fav and dog. Pretty boring. I need something else to consider a bet on this game.

What if I told you there was a HUGE factor that benefits the favorite here too? It involves Lord 1 Jupiter.

Hmm, Jupiter is not aspecting the Asc or Mc. It is past the POF, so that is not valid. Where are the goods?

Over the years, I looked for huge wins and losses that were not explainable by the rules we have discussed so far. After study and reflection, I determined it is imperative to add two other major angle pairs to the charts. They are easy to quickly view planet aspects. Once in a while, the goods in the chart are located there. That certainly applies to this one!

The antivertex-vertex and the equatorial ascendant-descendant are the other two angles. They are also used to check for planet aspects in Stellar Wheelhouse. In this book they are defined by the Ax and Vx axis in Solar Fire (antivertex-vertex) and the EQD-EQA axis in Solar Fire (equatorial ascendant-equatorial descendant axis; also known as eastpoint-westpoint). The eastern and western halves of the prime vertical are the Antivertex and the Vertex. These utilize the same longitudinal system followed in this book. The intersections of the horizon and prime vertical are the eastpoint and westpoint of the horizon. These utilize the Right Ascension (R.A.) system. In my charts, I put the Ax shaded to make them noticeable but non-obtrusive. For the EQD-EQA, I used to only place the Westpoint in (Ed) on the right chart side to avoid excess clutter. You can see this in our Colts-Rams wheel. These are treated identically to the Asc-Dsc. To calculate if a planet is aspecting these eastpoint-westpoint aka EQD-EQA angles we must use the R.A. values of the planets, NOT the zodiacal longitude. That's why, now, I remove the Ed from the chart and just use a simple glance to lookup the value on the computer screen. Finding the Right Ascension values is easy. This technical babble is for completeness, do not get hung up on it. The meshing of the three great circles - horizon, meridian and prime vertical - create these angle sets.

65

The longitudinal values can give you a heads up to see that a planet might be aspecting the EQD. In our Colts-Rams chart wheel we see Jupiter at 23 Libra and Ed at 23 Gemini so it is worth a look. Simply check the Points List Table in Solar Fire. This is always within a table on my screen template. Look at Jupiter: RA is 202. Look at the Equatorial Descendent, Ed: RA is 83. A trine is 120. $202 - 83 = 119$. Bingo! Jupiter is applying within 1 degree trine the EQD axis! L1 Jupiter is normal in this chart: a huge boost for the favorite! But wait, there is more! The Vertex axis is at 25 Can-Cap. Jupiter is 23Lib51. Wow, normal Jupiter is also square the Ax-Vx axis in this chart! Another huge boost as the most important planet for the favorite. This Jupiter is absolutely stacked with the angles! That has got to be a solid bet on the favorite Rams. Let's see exactly what happened. The Los Angeles Rams completely pummeled the Colts 46:9!

66

Now THAT shows the power of a team's planet connecting with multiple angles, most especially Lord 1 for the favorite. And you would miss it without including the Vertex and EQD axes. These two additional angle sets also distinguish otherwise identical charts. Below are charts from 2 MLB games starting at the exact same time in the same time zone (Central Standard Time). One takes place in Kansas City and the other takes place in Houston. Both have the same Ascendant and Midheaven within 1 degree. The POFs are nearly the same as well, since the POF utilizes the Ascendant in calculation. Now see this in the next two wheels: the Vertex in the top chart is 23 Pisces, and the Vertex in the lower chart is 14 Pisces!

That is a very significant difference indeed. One that places Neptune Lord 7 conjunct the Vertex in the first chart and far away in the second one. You can clearly see that could create very different game scenarios.

This is why having another set of angles to analyze can be very important!

67

68

Since you also see the Nodes for the first time in these chart, I will point out the rules of the Nodes for our sports purposes.

The North Node is like an influx of beneficial energy. The South Node is like a drain of depleting energy.

The apparent path of the Sun through Earth's sky (the ecliptic) is the blue ellipse, while the apparent path of the Moon is represented by the red ellipse. The 5-degree tilt of the Moon's orbit relative to the ecliptic results in the Moon rarely being at or near a node during the new moon/full moon point. When they are close, this results in an eclipse. This is why eclipses do not occur every month. [Accessed and retrieved via Vanderbilt University]

The Nodes are an axis of 2 mathematical points where the Moon intersects the ecliptic (more technically where the Moon's orbit around the Earth intersects the ecliptic plane of Earth's orbit around the Sun).

When planets get near them, things happen! You will find these rules very natural at this point in your Stellar Wheelhouse learning process.

Normal planet conjunct NN = helps planet.

Normal planet conjunct SN = hurts planet.

Use the "True Nodes" in your software. All within 2 degrees, applying is stronger. Outer planets are not relevant to this in my experience, as they stay connected much longer due to their slow speed.

Normal POF conjunct NN = helps favorite.

Normal POF conjunct SN = helps dog.

POF conjunct the Nodes is important in sports contests. All within 2 degrees, applying is stronger, closer the better.

Nodes on angles are ignored (just as the POF on angles is ignored).

You can safely ignore any "status" of the Nodes. I have not found it relevant.

Moon normal square Nodes = hurts favorite.

POF normal square Nodes = hurts favorite.

Planet normal square Nodes = hurts planet team (1 degree, inner planets only).

69

70

One more practice chart! English Premier League. Football or soccer for the Americans.

West Ham was a -0.5 goal favorite at home against Crystal Palace. Lord 7 is not involved in this chart, so no fret about the Virgo ruler.

Let's again start with the Moon. The Moon is busy, immediately going to square L2 Sun, then conjunct L11 Saturn, and finally sextile L1 Neptune Rx in 4.5 degrees near the end of the game. That helps the favorite decently, then dog slightly, then dog more strongly at the end, respectively. Normal Moon sextile reverse Neptune (due to Neptune Rx) for the Moon's final aspect should hurt the fav/help the dog near the conclusion of the 90 minute game (plus any extra added time), especially because Neptune is Lord 1, the favorite's most important planet.

Check this out: The Moon is normal as are the Sun and Saturn here. While both the Moon and Sun are indeed in some of their worst signs for each typically (Cap and Libra, respectively), note the important point that both their dispositors are in their best signs, thus returning the planets to normal status.

This is a rarity, but it does happen.

From the Moon aspects alone, I would not bet this game. Yes the underdog has 2 Moon hits compared to 1 for the favorite. That is not enough. I always like to see more helping the weaker team.

And more there is! We just discussed the Nodes. And what do you know, the Nodes have a lot of involvement in this chart. The Moon is initially conjunct the South Node.

While not a big deal, I have found it certainly does not help the favorites at all.

Since the Moon is initially squaring the Sun, that means L6 Sun is also square the Nodes. Again, not huge, but we now have both lights afflicted which simultaneously bother the favorite.

The Normal POF is square the ASC-DSC axis. For POF in Sign Gemini, we see Mercury in Scorpio.

Mercury's boss is the ruler of Scorpio, Pluto. Go to Pluto in Cap, then on to the first traditional planet Saturn which is normal in Cap.

So POF in Sign is normal and therefore POF Final is normal. Normal POF square ASC = hurts the fav. This is a 3rd hurdle for the favorite to overcome. Now we have a preponderance of evidence for the underdog. This pile of rough influences afflicting the favorite, along with two Moon aspects helping the dog along the way, are enough for me to make a bet on Crystal Palace +0.5 at -110. This means a draw would also be a win for our bet.

The result? 1:2 Crystal Palace wins. After a scoreless first half, the favorite West Ham struck first to take the lead. The underdog Palace answered back quickly to level the score on a penalty kick. Then on the 87th minute, right about when Moon sextile reverse L1 Neptune is strongest, Crystal Palace scored again to take the game outright.

71

Excellent work. There are 4 real games under your belt. Can you start to see the interplay between choosing strong events for the favorite vs the underdog to establish a position for your bet? Very good!

There are many dozens more games ahead!

I think you are ready for the final pieces of the process to be added to your charts.

You have completed part II, congratulations!

72

All charts have been modified to best fit this book's dimensions. Here is my full screen view template I use in Solar Fire (normally displayed horizontally of course). This is the page editor part of the program.

Use this as a reference if you are constructing your own.

73

Here is an example of my screen in Solar Fire. You may also omit the midpoint trees and fixed stars for a more simplified view, but note midpoints have value as discussed later in this book.

74

Part III

"The way your heart sounds makes all the difference.

It's what decides if you'll endure the pain that we all feel.
The way your heart beats makes all the difference in learning to live.
Spread before you is your soul. So forever hold the dream within our hearts.
Through nature's inflexible grace, I'm learning to live."
Time to put it all together. Look. What do you see?

75

Suddenly there are a whole lot of duplicate planets, smaller and on the inside ring! It looks like a party!

What is up with that?

Those are the ANTISCIA of the planets in the wheel. Antiscia ("opposite shadows", also known as solstice points) are planet mirror points equidistant from the solstice axis on the opposite side of that axis. The solstice axis is 0 Cap - 0 Can. Therefore, the planets will have antiscia in the following arrangement:

Gemini-Cancer

Leo-Taurus

Virgo-Aries

Libra-Pisces

Scorpio-Aquarius

Sagittarius-Capricorn

Thus, a planet at 26'06' Pisces will have its antiscia point at 03'53' Libra. This is Saturn's position in the chart above. A planet at 19 Tau (Moon in this chart) will have its antiscia point aMoon at 10 Leo.

Wait, did I make a typo with aVenus and aMoon? No, I did not.

I use the lowercase 'a' in front of a planet or point to denote it is the antiscia point. Uranus at 07

Taurus, aUranus at 23 Leo. Sun at 11 Sag, aSun at 19 Cap. And so on.

We must add these to our wheel. They are equally as important as the 'real' planet location. To predict successfully long-term, they are mandatory.

Good news: they operate exactly like we already learned from planets! It is simply another opportunity for the Moon to aspect antiscia planets, for antiscia planets to be near angles, and for antiscia planets to cast aspects.

That is correct, I can assure you that antiscia DO CAST aspects from years of sports chart work.

76

Now dig this. In this wheel segment, you see regular Mars is at 18 Gemini.

Its dispositor Mercury is in Gemini, so Mars is normal. But the antiscia of Mars is at 11 Cancer. That is a reverse sign for Mars; therefore aMars is reverse!

Antiscia planets must be read on their own and can have a different status than the regular planet counterpart.

Use the regular planet signs and status to determine the antiscia planets' status. Same as before. If the antiscia planet is in its own sign, it is normal there (aSun in Leo is normal, for example).

As in this example chart. Mars is normal, aMars is reverse.

Putting that point in an Aries Moon aspect in this chart would give us this:

Let's say we have an Aries

Moon sextile this norm Mars = normal. An Aries Moon square our rev aMars here = reverse.

Notice we also have an antiscia point for the POF. This is the aPOF. This too must be read with the aPOF in Sign portion to create the 3-piece meal that is the aPOF Final.

To calculate the aPOF Final, we still use the regular planet Sun status and the regular planet Moon status. The only change is finding the aPOF in Sign status using the aPOF antiscia sign and following the regular planet dispositors to determine the aPOF In Sign status. Then use those three (Moon status, Sun status, aPOF in Sign status) to create our 3-part aPOF Final status.

Since we are talking about aPOF, you need to know this major rule: The aPOF DOES have a big impact with the angles. Normal aPOF within 2 degrees of a major angle is very helpful for that team.

Normal aPOF on ASC (L1) = fav++. Normal aPOF on MC (L10) = fav+.

Normal aPOF on DSC (L7) = dog++. Normal aPOF on IC (L4) = dog+.

Normal Reverse aPOF within 2 degrees of a major angle is very hurtful for that team.

The same for aPOF within 2 degrees of a regular planet on the wheel: it is helpful for that Lord, especially if L1 or L7. Keep in mind the status of each.

Normal aPOF conjunct North Node = fav+. Normal aPOF conjunct South Node = dog+.

As you might guess from my descriptions above, the aPOF has heavy influence (a lot of pull) in sports contests. Again, it is not everything, but it is a very important point to know.

Reminding you of the important distinction: The POF next to angles is ignored. The aPOF next to angles is valuable and important.

Ignore POF conjunct angles.

Highly value the aPOF conjunct the ASC, MC, DSC, IC.

77

Let me wrap up the full Stellar Wheelhouse rule set with a few other very important notes.

You may have heard of the Anaretic Degree. This is a planet at 29 degrees of any sign = the last degree of a sign.

It traditionally makes a planet "accidentally weak." This was another wrench in my calculations for a short time. It is solved now.

Planets and points at 29 degrees automatically add a 'reverse' to their status calculation.

Thus the Moon in Aries with Mars normal remains normal UNLESS the moon is at 29 Aries. This 29 Aries

Moon then becomes reverse. A normal Jupiter in Capricorn, once it reaches 29 Capricorn, becomes reverse. A normal POF at 29 Aquarius adds a 'reverse' into your POF Final calculation.

This is not terribly common of course, but very easy to instantly add a mental note to 'flip' your planet or point one more time when it is at 29. You may not see many 29 Moon degree games, but you will when a slower-moving planet like Jupiter, Saturn, Uranus, Nep, Plu is at 29 for a longer timeframe.

Unlike Rx, the 29-degree status of a planet DOES affect its essential status like a sign, and DOES go on to affect any dispositors. Meaning, a 29 degree Mars in Gemini, if direct Merc is in a normal state by sign, means Mars is rev and means Merc is rev.

The only 29 degree exception I've seen thus far is a planet in its ruling sign. Venus in 29 Libra. Neptune in 29 Pisces. And so on. Those have remained normal.

You may also have read about Via Combusta: The Burning Way. The Fiery Path. This is a historically malefic degree range specifically for the Moon. Ancient astrologers considered a section of Libra and Scorpio as malefic to the Moon: Libra is the Fall of the Sun (opposite Aries) while Scorpio is the Fall of the Moon (opposite the traditional exaltation Taurus). Via Combusta is classically 15 Libra to 15 Scorpio (though many astrologers over the centuries have debated the range). I have found it closer to 14 Libra to 14 Scorpio.

78

It absolutely does work in practice and is vital to understand. Anytime the Moon, POF or aPOF are in this Via Combusta degree range, a 'Reverse' must be added to the essential status.

Example: The Moon is normal, Sun is normal, and the POF in Sign is 19 Libra. Imagine Venus is in Gemini normal, so POF in Sign is normal. But the POF being in Via Combusta is reverse.

The POF Final calculation is then $(\text{norm} * \text{norm} * \text{norm} * \text{rev}) = \text{reverse}$. It's like adding a 4th item to the POF

Final calculation: $\text{moon} * \text{sun} * \text{apof in sign} * \text{via combusta} = \text{POF Final}$.

Example: The aPOF is in 04 Scorpio. This aPOF is in the Via Combusta range.

So is this aPOF normal or reverse? Say the Moon is in Capricorn and reverse, not being saved by Saturn.

The Sun is in Leo. Imagine

Pluto is normal. So the aPOF Final calculation is $(\text{rev Moon} * \text{norm Sun} * \text{norm aPOF in sign} * \text{rev}) = \text{This}$ aPOF at 04 Sco is normal.

The only exception I have seen with the Via Combusta portion of the POF calculation remaining normal, is when the POF dispositor is very happy. And one final exception: When the Moon or the POF is conjunct the fixed star Spica (within 1 degree of 24'Lib'11 as of 2026), they are granted brief absolution and are normal. Spica may heal and 'normalize' any planet, in fact.

Here is our RULERSHIP LIST once more:

1 Mars 2 _____ 3 Mercury

4 Moon 5 Sun 6 _____

7 Venus 8 Pluto 9 Jupiter

0 Saturn - Uranus = Neptune

It is time to fill in the blanks for Taurus and Virgo.

To be blunt, Taurus and Virgo have cost me more money than I would ever care to share.

79

It started innocently enough. In my first years of astro sports prediction, I would see Moon aspecting

Venus in a chart, and OF COURSE, would look to Taurus as the ruler, as everyone always does.

After a remarkably intense run of Moon to Venus connections when the Lord was in Taurus, I noticed that those moments of the game never did much. I mean, essentially nothing.

The typical scoring moments for a Moon aspect to the expected Lord of Taurus were ineffective.

I chalked it up to Venus being a little "weaker" in Taurus.

But it kept happening. And POF in Taurus seemed not to respond to the Venus norm/rev status either.

Something was very odd.

After a particularly brutal loss of serious money on two consecutive games with heavy Taurus connections in the chart, I had enough. This Taurus rulership business was truly amiss.

I began a very intense and detailed study of every Taurus-y game I could get my fingers on. I poured through historical collections of betting odds for games, collected endless start times for Moon in Taurus events, Sun in Taurus events, Venus in Taurus events, on and on, and got down to work.

After that extensive and intensive evaluation, you know what? Whatever Lord was Venus for the game, this Lord did NOT respond to its duty for the favorite or for the underdog when it should.

I finally came to this important conclusion:

For sports astrology in Stellar Wheelhouse, VENUS RULING TAURUS IS A MYTH. A FRAUD. A FAKE. YOU

DO NOT USE VENUS AS THE RULER OF TAURUS. NEVER>EVER>>EVER!!

After coming to this harsh realization, I blankly stared at my screen for a long time.

Well, heck. What planet DO I USE for Taurus lord?

And this began another long search. I looked at asteroids. I looked at the Uranian-cosmobiology school of calculated points. I looked at so many of the planets in the Solar Fire lists. To try and isolate all this one by one, affecting individual basketball, baseball, football games, is a herculean task.

As I explained in the introduction to this book, you need enough games where the planet in question is 'isolated' by a nice Moon aspect or hitting the angles just so for the planet or its antiscia. And this is really needed in the absence of other outer-planet or POF factors that will put their stamp on the game, thereby 'muddying the waters' of pure energy streams.

But steadily, one planet started to emerge after a year of searching.

Taurus linked to this planet suddenly had an impact. Noticeably.

And the most important test of all, the dispositor chain status test, also started to show brilliance. It properly switched normal to reverse to normal on cue.

This was extraordinarily joyful and bliss-inducing! I had found the missing planet and sign link!

And now I share with you what I think the planet is that rules Taurus. Why does it? How? I have not the slightest clue. But I know it works very well. And far, far better than Venus ever did.

80

Does it rule it for regular horary or financial astrology or astrology-at-large too? I do not know.

I go where the data leads me. Data that unequivocally demonstrates I have definitive proof from start to finish of a sporting contest that my answer works.

As I said, after losing a ton of money on the ruler of Taurus over years in otherwise-excellent sports betting, I had a very good incentive to find the truth in these charts. I have done that undeniably to my satisfaction for the Lord of Taurus.

The planet that rules Taurus for Stellar Wheelhouse is Eris.

2 Eris

Eris has been in Aries since 1928 and will continue to be so through 2044.

So for Eris in Aries, you look to Mars for the essential status! It is a simple passthrough to the first full planet dispositor, like our rules always say.

What a relief! This also calmed my consternation regarding Uranus moving into Taurus for many years.

Moon-Uranus aspects and Uranus/aUranus touching the angles began to have the same issues. Once Eris became clear as the Taurus ruler, all the Uranus in Taurus problems disappeared too.

Here's an example of a dispositor chain to find planet status when in Eris: Ura in Tau-Eri in Ari-Mars. Find Mars' status in the chart and that becomes the answer for Eris and Uranus.

Eris is a trans-Neptunian object. These are defined as any minor or dwarf planet that orbits the Sun at a greater average distance than Neptune. Eris was discovered in 2005 and is nearly the same size as Pluto yet brighter and more massive.

81

So that concludes the answer in Stellar Wheelhouse for Taurus. And that leaves Virgo. Leave it to fussy, nitpicky Virgo being hardest to pin down a rulership answer.

What I do know, just as with the Venus in Taurus problem, was that Mercury ruling Virgo DID NOT WORK. The same "weak" (really meaning none) effect took place in the sports charts when Mercury, as supposed lord of the Virgo house, made no impact on Moon and angle aspects. Once more, this was causing me problems. I was avoiding betting Virgo Moon days each month to skip this fuss. I could indeed let the planets tell me for the daily Virgo status, but it was not a confident feeling ignorant of the source. YOU DO NOT USE MERCURY AS THE RULER OF VIRGO.

Back to the epic search again.

As I continued searching for Virgo's ruler, I came across some astonishing information. Be it known that I have read a good number of astrology books in my time. Mostly classical and renaissance texts, but a lot more modern authors as well who discuss both traditional and modern astrology.

I was not much into modern psychological astrologers. One momentous day, I happened upon a Danish astrologer's website who stated that Liz Greene and Linda Goodman, two famous modern psychological astrologers, both agreed that true rulers were missing for Taurus and Virgo! My eyes got big; my mouth got bigger! I never knew this?! It absolutely agrees with my sports chart research!

He agreed too and had done statistical analysis to determine the true rulers based on his chart data and computer programming.

And what did he find the ruler for Taurus was based on his data?

ERIS!

Remarkable! We both found our data independently!

That still left a gap for the Virgo ruler. I originally used this person's researched ruler for Virgo but was left unsatisfied. So, the hunt continued. This took many more months, and I went through a number of potential options - some very esoteric, some mundane. In the end, I came back to one that was more familiar after seeing planet sign changes that locked into the status of this planet.

I am pleased to say this now works well in my extensive experience; certainly, the best any planet has thus far as Virgo's ruler.

82

The planet that rules Virgo for Stellar Wheelhouse is Ceres.

6 Ceres

I get it, this is total heretical doctrine of the highest order in traditional and modern astrological schools.

All I know and can say is I use what has worked, period. And this by far has worked the best for Ceres thusfar.

Ceres is considered a dwarf planet (the only dwarf planet within the inner solar system) and is the largest object in the asteroid belt between Mars and Jupiter. Of the entire asteroid belt, Ceres makes up 25% of its mass. It takes about 4.6 years for one rotation around the Sun. Here then is our final rulership list for my Stellar Wheelhouse method:

1 Mars 2 Eris 3 Mercury
4 Moon 5 Sun 6 Ceres
7 Venus 8 Pluto 9 Jupiter
0 Saturn - Uranus = Neptune

83

Finally, I need to share some individual important planet rules I have noted over the years with good effect. You will incorporate this into your sports betting mindset as you continue to practice.

It may look like a lot of rules. Remember they are a part of the chart puzzle! Know they follow similar guidelines with what you have already learned. Stay calm and enjoy your time and experience with the charts. Looking at the games, the patterns and the results will begin to solder into your brain.

General rules for Planets and aPlanets (all with NORMAL status within 2 degrees applying)

Mars trine Asc-Dsc = fav (unless L7).

Mars square Asc-Dsc = dog (unless L1).

Mars trine Mc-Ic = dog (unless L1).*

Mars square Mc-Ic = fav (unless L7).*

(Mars, Sat, Ur, and Plu hitting the Mc-Ic axis are flipped response from their answers to the Asc-Dsc.)

Mars on the Asc-Mc midpoint (1 degree) = dog (unless L1).

Mars sextile-trine POF or aPOF = fav.

Mars conjunct-square-opp POF or aPOF = dog.

Saturn trine Asc-Dsc = fav (unless L7).

Saturn square Asc-Dsc = dog (unless L1).

Saturn trine Mc-Ic = dog (unless L7).

Saturn square Mc-Ic = fav (unless L1).

Saturn on the Asc-Mc midpoint (1 degree) = dog (unless L1).

Uranus, Neptune and Pluto have special authority as outer planets regardless which Lord they are.

Uranus is normally dog biased, helps the dog more often.

Uranus trine Asc-Dsc (unless L7).

Uranus square Asc-Dsc = dog (unless L1).

Uranus square MC-IC = fav (unless L7).

Uranus conjunct Asc = dog (if L7, watch which side of the house it occupies) Uranus conjunct Mc = fav .

Uranus conjunct, sextile or trine the POF or aPOF = fav+ (yes, fav).

Uranus square or opposite the POF or aPOF = dog.

Neptune is normally fav biased, helps the fav more often.

Neptune conj Asc = fav.

Neptune conj Mc = dog.

Neptune normal OR reverse aspecting any Asc, Mc, Dsc or Ic seems to always help favorite (unless L7).

Neptune conjunct, sextile or trine the POF or aPOF = fav.

Neptune square or opposite the POF or aPOF = dog.

84

Pluto is normally dog biased, helps the dog more often.

Pluto conjunct Asc = dog (unless L1).

Pluto conjunct Mc = fav.

Pluto trine Asc-Dsc = fav (unless L7).

Pluto square Asc-Dsc = dog.

Pluto trine Mc-Ic = dog (unless L7).

Pluto square Mc-Ic = fav (unless L1).

Pluto/aPluto on Asc = dog+.

Pluto/aPluto on Mc = fav+.

Normal Uranus/aUranus on the Ascendant is always very helpful to the underdog. Uranus makes a little more sense when you know this fact from NASA: Magnetic fields are typically aligned with a planet's rotation. But Uranus' magnetic field is tipped over: the magnetic axis is nearly 60 degrees tilted from its axis of rotation. So it actually does make things go sideways.